For some time after this Bytham seems to have remained in the hands of the Earl of Albemarle, but in 1220 he revolted and was besieged by Henry III at Bytham. The Castle however surrendered on Feb. 3, 1221; and according to Murray's Guide to Lincolnshire (though Paris says nothing) Henry III reinstated Will. de Colville. Anyhow he was in possession at his death in 1230.

POSTSCRIPT. Mr Corbett points out to me that a William de Colville gave land at Duxford to Tiltey Abbey. This must have been subsequent to 1198 as it is not mentioned in Richard's Charter of Confirmation. See Monasticon v. 625. It was continued by Henry III in a charter dated 13 March 1251 (Charter Roll, Rolls Series).

THE MORTUARY ROLL OF THE ABBESS OF LILLECHURCH, KENT.

By C. E. SAYLE, M.A.

This roll was exhibited at a meeting of this Society in 1869 by the then President of the Society, who is also our oldest living member, Professor Mayor. The roll is now in one of the show-cases of St John's College Library; and the property of Lillechurch is also now in the possession of that College. It was presented to the College through the good offices of Bishop Fisher. Tanner says that the College possesses about 200 documents relating to the priory. A short account of the literature of these rolls may be of some assistance.

In 1690 Martene first published his volume on this and cognate subjects. It became by 1700 his big book, De Antiquae Ecclesiae Ritibus, the second and fuller edition of which was printed in 1736. A good deal of evidence is there given which calls here for little remark in our own country. In 1825, in a catalogue of the MSS. in Durham Cathedral Library, Canon Raine drew attention to the existence of a mortuary roll in that collection. In 1847 J. G. Nichols, at a meeting of the Archaeological Institute at Norwich, read a paper on a portion of an obituary roll of an abbot of West Dereham, and in 1855 Albert Way, one of our own forgotten worthies, read a paper before our own Society on a portion of a mortuary roll of John Hotham, Bishop of Ely, which found its way somehow to the archives of Canterbury Cathedral. In 1856 Canon

Raine published through the Surtees Society the mortuary roll in extenso which he had catalogued twenty-six years before. His preface is the best account of mortuary rolls which we have in the language. The paper by Nichols is however still worth reading. Eleven years later, in 1866, M. Leopold de Lisle published a volume of over 500 pages relating to the subject of mortuary rolls in France, *Rouleaux des Morts*¹.

These rolls, I should perhaps add, consist of long narrow pieces of parchment stitched together. The present one is 37 ft. 3 in. long, and on the average about 7 in. wide. It consists of nineteen membranes, some of which are written on both sides. There are 372 entries in all in the document, that is, entries of the ecclesiastical houses visited by the roll-bearer for the purpose of gaining prayers for the soul of Abbess Amphilissa.

Such rolls are rare. There is not one in the University Library, and Dr James (who has kindly been through my transcript with me and corrected the grosser errors) assures me that, but for two fragments in a binding in the library of Jesus College, he does not know of any other in the University. Nichols, in 1847, stated there was not a single one in the British Museum².

In length the present roll takes a position midway. The Durham roll contains mention of 639 houses (Raine, p. xvi). The Ely roll, fragment only, contains only 27 (Way, p. 127).

As to date we are more fortunate. Prior Burnaby, who is commemorated in the Durham roll, died in 1456 (xiv.), and Prior Ebchester in 1464. Bishop Hotham, of Ely, died in 1337. Prioress Amphilissa is said, in Dugdale's Monasticon (iv. 378), to have been flourishing in 1298. Browne Willis says that she died in the following year. The first roll mentioned by Nichols is that of Matilda, abbess of Caen, in the year 1112, with 254 tituli³; and the second of 1122 with 250⁴.

The first English mortuary roll is that for Lucy, prioress and foundress of the Church of the Holy Cross and St Mary, at Headingham, in Essex. This is dated 1190. A facsimile of this has been reproduced in the current year (1903) in the first part of the publication of the New Palaeographical Society. Ours, which Nichols does not mention, must come next, for his second roll is that of William Bateman, Bishop of Norwich, and founder of Trinity Hall, who died in 1354¹. He mentions others of 1416, 1453, 1456, and 1464, and 1492 for the abbot of Bury St Edmunds², and also one for the year 1502, a prior of Coventry; and finally, one for Westminster in 1522. They were often ornate, as may be seen from the Dereham roll. Ours is plain.

It is of considerable and lasting interest to know what those 372 houses were which were visited by the roll-bearer about the year 1300; how far they can all be identified; and further, what relation those 372 houses bear to the 639 houses visited in 1456 and 1464. Finally, I wish to emphasize the importance of a dated document which contains well over 300 different and widely varying styles of handwriting. This palaeographical side of the question is by no means the least interesting one. At some future time it will be the obvious duty of some Palaeographical Society or individual student to examine the document from this point of view.

The transcript here printed consists of these 372 names arranged in the order of the roll, and now for the first time numbered. Following the name of the place is the name of the Dedication of the house, which is invariably given. In a third column I have given the name of the modern locality; and in a fourth column the county. In a fifth column I have given the name of the particular religious order to which the house belonged—Augustinian, Benedictine, Cistercian, Gilbertine, Premonstratensian or Alien. And lastly, by means of an asterisk I have indicated whether the name of the house occurs in the Durham List. I have added an alphabetical index of places, and a table of the places mentioned arranged under counties.

The giant's share of the work, as in the preceding communication, has again been generously undertaken by Mr J. E. Foster.

¹ There is another St Mary de Pré in Herefordshire. See no. 193. ² A cell to Reading. See no. 353.

ADDITIONAL NOTES.

- No. 10. Cf. no. 368.
- 15. Cf. no. 231.
- 50. Dedicated to S. Mary alone.
- 52. Bylch is dedicated to S. Nicolas (Surtees, p. 25).
- 68. Now S. Wystan; and SS. Mary and James.
- 89. Careswell = Cresswell, or Kessewell in Herefordshire. See J. Nichols, Alien Priories, ii. 43, and Tanner, Not. Mon. s.v. This is the only house given in the Bateman roll, mentioned on p. 385, the transcription of which is in Trinity Hall Library. (Cf. Peck, Desiderata Curiosa, p. 242.)
