

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

(this is just a heap at the moment: debts jotted down as they occur, in no partic. order)

Thanks to landowners/tenants: Swantons, Todd, Sangster, English Farms, Bloomfield, Count whatsit

(get all the thanks from the Interim rpts: grants from Ants in 1961, 1963 and 1964 (elected Fellow 9 Jan 1964, with lectures in Nov. 1967 and 1997), Marc Fitch)

Other institutions: Nat Cons, RCHM, WAS, Ewks C'ttee, MOW/EH, Devizes Mus, and especially its successive Curators Ken Annable and Dr. Paul Robinson, Bristol Univ XM Dept. and esp. its Director, Prof. Geoffrey Cunliffe; UNUT - leave of absence, and Dept. of Archaeology for house-room and a tranche of half-a-dozen brilliant graduates 1994-6 who made critical inputs; and Dept. Agricultural and Environmental Science for practical and intellectual support during a difficult passage 1996-7

Partic. individuals: Elizabeth Fowler, Gillian Swanton, Bill and Phyllis Fowler, GWDimbleby, HCBowen, E.G.H.Kempson, Jim Hemsley, Inigo Jones, Noel King, JGEvans, Prof. Mark Overton (now Exeter Univ), Noel Grudgings (photographer); Sylvia Young, doc. help.

Surveying: Peter Drewett and Nick Bradford

I would also like to thank all the site supervisors on the excavation programme. They were as follows:

Delling enclosure: Anthony Witheridge, John Scantlebury

Down Barn enclosure: John Scantlebury, Gill Swanton

Fyfield lynchet: Ann Woodward (née Heard)

OD I-III: Jim Specht

OD X/XI: Peter Drewett, Tania Dickenson (Briscoe), Chris Gingell, Ann Woodward (Heard), Dr Isobel Smith

OD XII: Bill Fowler, Graham Thomas, David Fowler

TD I-III: F.B. Simpson and David Fowler

TD VIII: Andrew Tarr

TD IX: Brian Perry

WC: Bill Fowler, Chris Knowles

Thanks to all the 100s of diggers and assts. + cooks Phyllis Fowler, Mandy Wright and Gill Swanton (Lawton) esp. long-termers like Norris Thompson, W.G. and Madge Drew, Nick and Sheila Pratchett, Mike and Steven Batt, Betty Bostock, Sue, Peter and John Dunstone, Diana Friendship, James Hancock, Philip Harding, Georgina Plowright, Arthur Selway, Alan Vince, Michael Wadhams

This volume, and its accompanying Archive, has been made possible by an initiative of Dr. G. J. Wainwright, Chief Archaeologist at English Heritage. We are grateful for his advice and interest. Funding for the preparation of this report was provided by English Heritage; the work was managed by Gill Andrews without whom etc etc and Ann Clark ditto. Both provided advice and guidance far beyond the call of.....

Contributions to the report were made largely by the Trust for Wessex Archaeology under the aegis of its sympathetic Director, Andrew Lawson. The work of its team of professionals was indispensable, and I would thank in particular Lorraine Mephram and her fellow specialists, especially those who bore the brunt of the 'finds reports', namely Rachael Seager Smith, Tessa Mackling and Michael Allen. Other specialists who contributed included Barbara Noddle, with pioneer work on animal bones, Juliet Rogers and Bob Everton on the human bones, Anne Everton on the flints, Jenny Price (Roman glass), who produced a brilliant report and catalogue, and Josh Pollard (the Beaker). The help of Gill Swanton has been crucial for the last 25 years and, at the last, she too has contributed in field and with text to this volume.

In addition, thanks also go to the Tyne & Wear Museums Archaeology Department at South Shields for their continuing expertise, esp. Margaret Snape, who wrote up a completely unknown site (OD XII) from scratch and the record alone, supported by the critical interest of Paul Bidwell. Historians John Hare and Simon Yarrow made authoritative and distinctive contributions from original documentary research which encouraged the whole study to expand seriously into post-Roman landscapes. The whole landscape of all periods was exposed by the stunning cartographic work of AP of Cathy Stoertz of RCHME whose map provided the spatial and archaeological framework within which exploring 35 years' work could generate some sort of understanding.

Curiously, there seemed little appropriate experience to draw on in arranging our archive and the way it is is largely our creation. Paul Robinson at Devizes Museum and Nigel Clubb of NMR proved, however, helpful and constructive.

The volume and archive were assembled with significant contributions from Chris Lucas in the early stages, Louisa Ward, and Christine Martinez. Some of the graphics published here were prepared by Sandra Rowntree, and Trevor Ermell, of Monochrome, Newcastle, prepared the prints of nearly all the ground photographs. Prints of air photographs, and other help, came from the National Monuments Record of England, the Ashmolean Museum and Cambridge University Committee for Aerial Photography. I would thank in particular Bob Bewley and Roger Featherstone of the first, and David Wilson of the last, for their interest and assistance. In the latter stages, Prof. Richard Bradley, Chris Taylor, Desmond Bonney and Margaret Snape 'volunteered' their time and learning for reading and criticising acres of TS.

Back in the engine-house at Newcastle, five people essentially made this volume possible. Julie Watson proved the perfect amuensis for an increasingly overwhelmed author and it was tragic that illness removed her from the project. Bob Johnson provided support with intellectual rigour in his first post-graduate year, helping draft Chapters 13 and 14. Graeme Stobbs and Kristian Strutt rescued a dire graphics situation in 1996 and both helped in the creation of this volume and its archive far beyond the role of mere draughtsmen. From beginning to end of the creation of volume and archive, I have been indefatigably and percipiently supported by Ian Blackwell, initially my post-graduate student, then my colleague and now my friend. He has literally kept the show on the road, drafted significant parts of the text and largely organised the archive now available at Devizes Museum and the NMR. Chapter 5 is largely his, and Chapters 9-12 would not exist without his documentary and historical skills. As author, profoundly conscious as I am of such enormous debts accumulated through this project throughout a lifetime, I am as conscious of, and as grateful for, friendship gained as together we have plotted a landscape and pieced together some understanding of it.
