ALBURY

- Page 80. I. The first three lines of the small print should now read:
 Sir Robert bought Weston Manor after the death of Abel Alleyne, who had bought it 1724 from Mrs. Hester Woodroffe and Anne Sturt, daughters of George Duncombe (d. 1719) and Martha Peyton, and not daughters of Geo. Duncombe (see V) and Judith Caryll.
- Page 81. Key Pedigree of Duncombe should be revised as shown on p. 68.
- Page 85. Last six lines should read:
 4. qly. of four: 1 & 4 Duncombe. 2 Reynes. 3 Morteyne impaling:
 arg. a chevron gu. between three roses . . . stalked and leaved . . . Muscott (?)
 (? George Duncombe and Charity Muscott)
 Mr. J. C. B. Poulter (to whom I am indebted) suggests that these arms may well be a variant of the arms of Muscote of Barton and Welby, Northants, who bore:

gu., on a cross engrailed arg. five roses gu.

- Page 86.

 5. Line 6 of small print should read:
 Hester Woodroffe.
 (Confusion with Letitia Woodroffe arose because both Hester and Letitia were daughters of George Duncombe and both married Woodroffes.) Hester, née Duncombe, married Geo. Woodroffe and her arms are quartered by her son, George, in his hatchment at Seale, Surrey.
- Page 93. XXII. Supporters should read: as in XXI, but sinister supporter has collar counter-compony.
- Page 103. In key pedigree of Howard, the "drop" should be from Margaret Gamage, 2nd wife of Wm., 1st Baron

Howard of Effingham, and not from Katherine Broughton. 1st wife, who was mother only of a daughter, Agnes.

ASHTEAD

XI. Lines 5 and 6 should read: Page 110.

impaling

(vert) three boars' heads couped (arg.) Burley.

Lines 1-3 of small print should read:

Peter was son of Wm. Sandys, 1st husband of Philadelphia Uphill, who m. 2ndly Rev. Wm. Duncombe, son of George Dunconbe and Charity Muscott, and not son of George (see Albury V) by Judith Caryll.

The rest of the paragraph should be deleted.

The references should read:

The heraldry of the N. light is intended to show the origin and derivation of Sir John's estates at Lydiard Tregoz, Wilts, Purley, Berks, and Battersea, Surrey.

The Centre light, to show his descent and double connection with

The Royal House of Tudor.

The S. light, to show his connections with many distinguished families through the marriages of his sisters, cousins and aunts.

Peatling (see references) does not describe the heraldry, but refers readers to Taylor's book.

Richard St. George (see N. light) was attached to the College of Arms, and was Berwick Pursuivant, Windsor Herald, Norroy King of Arms, Clarenceux, in turn. He it was who was responsible for the heraldic family trees on the triptych in Lydiard Tregoz Church. He was uncle of Sir John St. John, the donor of the glass. Richard's son, Sir Henry St. George, was Richmond Herald when, in 1627, the King sent him to Sweden to present the Order of the Garter to Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, who granted St. George the right to add the Royal Arms of Sweden in a canton as an augmentation. St. George became Norroy and then Garter King of Arms.

Taylor states that the golden eagle of Grandison with the Tregoz hame on its breast dates from the marriage of Wm. Lord Grandison with Sybil Tregoz, c. 1288.

The arms usually now attributed to Hungerford appeared as those of Sir Adam Fitz John in the Purley Roll, temp. Edw II. Walter Hungerford, at the siege of Rouen 1418, quartered Fitz John 1 and 4, Heytesbury 2 and 3.
