A small intimate museum showing furniture and woodwork in authentic period settings. The former almshouses of the Ironmongers' Company provide a sympathetic architectural background to a collection which aims to recreate the atmosphere of the middle-class interior at various stages of its development from about 1600.

Special facilities are available for school parties but these are now so popular that booking considerably in advance is essential.

The museum can be reached by underground (Liverpool Street or Old Street) and by bus (22, 48, 67, 149, 243).

Available from :
