EXHIBITIONS

The Emperor's Terracotta Warriors and Horses from the Qin Dynasty, at the Royal Horticultural Society's Old Hall, Vincent Square, S.W.1, until 20 February. Of the 7500-strong terracotta army from Qin Shihuang's burial mound (210 BC) in Shaanxi province, eleven representative warriors and two chariot horses form the nucleus of the exhibition; also on display are other artefacts (including crossbows), photographs of the excavation and graphics.

Open 9.30 a.m. - 9 p.m. on weekdays and 10 a.m. - 9 p.m. at weekends. Priority will be given to school groups between 9.30 and 11.30 a.m. on weekdays. Advance and group booking information on (01) 828 2768. Admission: adults £4.50, OAPs, students and children £3.00, school groups £2.00 per pupil.

Glass of the Caesars, at the British Museum, until March 1988. With 161 examples of glass from the Imperial period, this exhibition will demonstrate the important developments in Roman glass from the 1st century to the Arab conquest. Drawing upon the collections of three museums (the British Museum, the Corning Museum of Glass and the Römisch-Deutsches Museum) and some fine pieces from Italy, the exhibition will show all the techniques of making and decorating glass during the whole Imperial period. Admission £1.50, usual reductions 50p. Presented by Olivetti.

Whitefriars: the unique Glasshouse, at the Museum of London, until 1 January 1989. The intriguing story of a London glassworks, situated off Fleet Street for over 200 years. Features huge mosaic panels, early scientific instruments and stunning early 20th century coloured glass from the Whitefriars collection, as well as glowing 17th and 18th century drinking glasses from the Garton collection.
