

...be your space?

As an experiment, London Archaeologist will be offering not-for-profit organisations the chance to advertise for a very low cost in our summer issue, out in early July.

If you'd like to attract participants to your big event for Festival of British Archaeology (like the real TIME CHEAM course below right), recruit more members to your local society, advertise your community dig, promote an exhibition or sign up students for an autumn course, this could be the ideal opportunity.

You can either supply a pdf, or we can probably do some simple artwork for you, like the examples on this page. To find out more, email us via the contact page on our website, londonarchaeologist.org.uk, or write to the address on the contents page of this issue. Deadline 1 June.

Could our space...

Local archaeology and beyond

An ad like this could attract people to join your own local society for its winter events programme, summer digs and year-round field trips to sites from Bristol to Brindisi.

You could even have them quote London Archaeologist for a discount...

Have you got the best little museum in town?

Tell everyone about your latest acquisitions, promote a special exhibition or list your special summer family events. A low-cost ad in the next issue of London Archaeologist could bring in new visitors.

THE TIME CHEAM

Sutton Central Library

4th–9th July 2011

Sign up for this popular and practical course to be trained to study the pottery from a deposit of medieval Cheam ware.

Visitors are also welcome to look round, talk with the volunteers and help with the work.

Fees for the training course, free entry for visitors.

Details and booking form from

Clive Orton

39a Benhill Wood Road

Sutton SM1 3SL

or email cliveorton@btinternet.com.

The project website is cheamware.org.uk.