BIAB Stage 1 – strategic vision

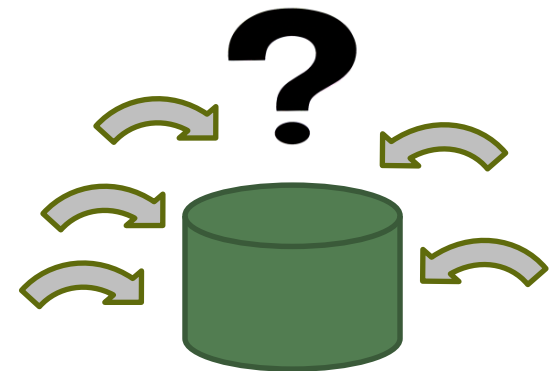

BIAB could not continue its current form and needed a new home, so...

Who was using BIAB?

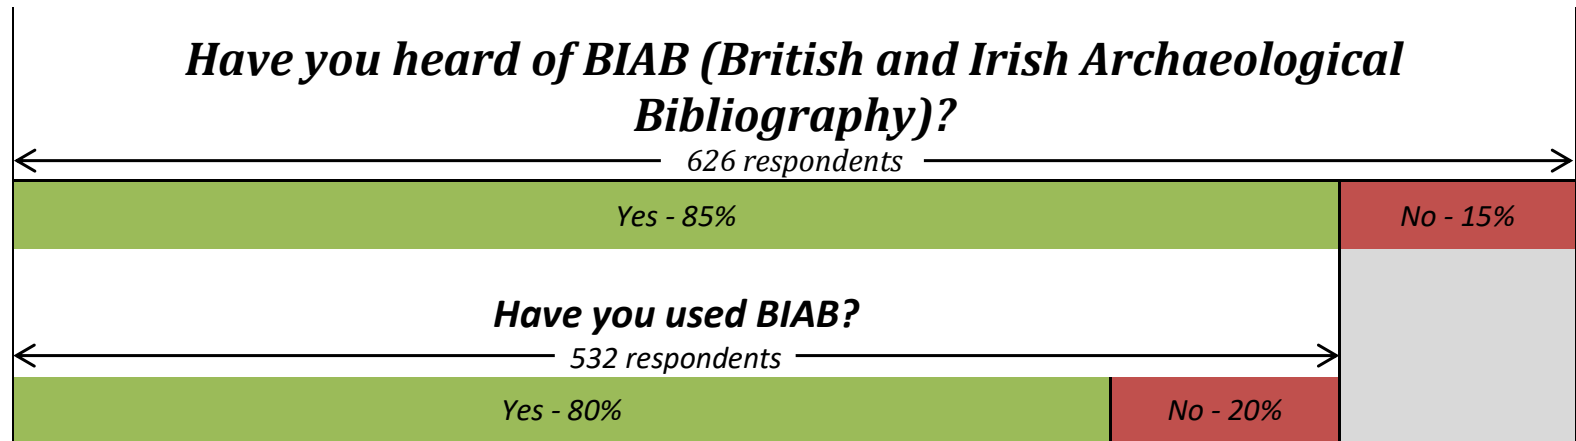

How would we combine the existing datasets?

How would we continue to add records in the future?

627 People responded to the survey

There were over one hundred comments, the main points were:

About a fifth of respondents:

- Thought that BIAB is a great resource for archaeology and the historic environment
- Wanted links to online publications where available
- Thought that it should contain more up-to-date records
- Thought the data quality could be improved by the removal of duplicate authors
- Thought that the search interface could be improved

One in ten respondents thought that BIAB coming to the ADS was a positive step.

What was planned

Redesign the existing BIAB database to incorporate other existing datasets

Keep database up to date using automated feeds of data from large publishers

Add a web form in the new library to allow small publishers and volunteers to add and edit records

OASIS reports – ADS Library

- The bibliographic record goes into the library straight away
- OASIS LITE: report archived and transferred with no delay
- OASIS STANDARD: report held until signed off by HER but transferred if not signed off within ? months; timescale to be agreed (most reports are signed off by HERs within 3 months of record creation).
- Should the HER be able to place an embargo on a report as well as the contractor?

3003060	Offa's Dyke:	?	195 - 206	Presents an interpretation of the eighth-century earthwork, based on the known earthworks, which does not need to explain away perceived gaps.
3003061	Monumental brasses and the Black Death -- a reappraisal	?	207 - 247	Stylistic analysis, particularly of the inscriptions, shows that there was continuity of production in the London A workshop right through the era of recurrent plague and that a second workshop, London B, was established towards the end of the 1350s. The workshops appear to have responded to a reduced supply of skilled labour by limiting their product range. The brasses of the plague years are modest in comparison with earlier brasses, though those commemorated were not of lower status. No large figure brasses date from this decade, though significant numbers of minor
