LIST OF MEMBERS OF THE CLOCKMAKERS' COMPANY OF LONDON, FROM THE PERIOD OF THEIR INCORPORATION IN 1631 TO THE YEAR 1732.

By C. OCTAVIUS S. MORGAN, F.R.S., F.S.A.

The Clockmakers' Company of London was incorporated at the Petition of the Clockmakers, as well Freemen of London as foreigners residing there, by a Royal Charter in the year 1631, by the name of "The Master, Wardens and Fellowship of the Art and Mystery of Clockmaking of the City of London."

The Company consists of a Master, three Wardens, and ten or more Assistants, chosen out of the fellowship, who have power by their Charter to make bye-laws for the government of all persons using the trade in London, or within ten miles thereof, and for the regulation of the manner in which the trade should be carried on throughout the realm.

The Company has no hall, but its meetings have from its first establishment been regularly held in some tavern in the City.

It must be borne in mind by persons desirous of knowing the age of a clock, that no clock had a pendulum before the year 1661. The movement was governed by a vertical rod or "verge," having small flat pallets which played on the teeth of a crown wheel, from which it received an alternating movement which was regulated by a horizontal bar at the top, in form of the letter T, weighted at the extremity of the arms; or by a horizontal wheel in the same manner as the escapements of the old watches of the period; a perfect original example of this balance is to be seen in the ancient Dover clock, exhibited in the mechanical collection at South Kensington.

About 1639, Galileo first discovered the isochronous vibrations of a pendulum, and his son Vicenzo Galileo reduced his father's discoveries to practice, and in 1649 put up the first pendulum clock at Venice.

Pendulum clocks were first introduced and made in England by Ahasuerus Fromantil, a Dutch clockmaker in London in 1661, and the first had short or "bob" pendulums. In 1680 Mr. W. Clement of London improved the mechanism of the escapement by introducing the swing wheel with the anchor pallets, by which he was enabled to have a longer pendulum and heavier "bob," which beat more regularly in seconds, and vibrated in a smaller arc, and many old clocks were altered in consequence of these two inventions.

This list was extracted from the books of the Company and arranged alphabetically and chronologically by Octavius Morgan, Esq., M.P., F.R.S., F.S.A., in the year 1848.
The first Freemen admitted in 1631-2 were certainly all clock-makers, as were most probably all those admitted to their freedom in this Company for the first few years. Afterwards it is not so certain. It is probable also that many clock and watch-makers had taken out their freedom in other companies, and were subsequently admitted Brothers, or members of the fellowship of this, as many certainly had exercised the business of clock-makers before they belonged to this company, being admitted brothers, and at the time of their admission called "Great Clockmakers."

1. Attached to a name indicates a certainty of the person having been a clock-maker by trade.
2. Following a name means that he was admitted a "Brother."
3. Indicates his having been mentioned on his admission as a "Great Clockmaker."

Those names without any mark were admitted to their freedoms as "Free Clockmakers."

Many were case-makers, engravers, &c., connected with the trade, and after the admission of mathematical instrument makers, many were probably of that business. Many were quite unconnected with the trade, and only took out their freedom as of that company. Clock-makers however seem all to have been sworn and admitted brothers, and it may be fairly presumed that the brothers were all clock-makers by trade, and that at the first establishment of the company, none but actual clock and watch-makers were admitted members of it, say to 1640.

The names of the Masters, Wardens, and Assistants are given every five years, as showing from time to time who were the principal members of the Company.
