INTRODUCTION.

Of the many fields of research open to the student of ecclesiology, few are more interesting, or produce more valuable results than do the wills of our mediaeval forefathers. It is no exaggeration to say that no parochial history, worthy of the name, can be compiled without a careful study of the old wills. It is true, of course, that in certain parishes no old wills are forthcoming, but this is only a rare occurrence, and is often accounted for by the fact that the wills of that particular parish were proved in a "peculiar," or more rarely in a manorial court, the early records of which have been lost.

The wills from which we propose to quote are to be found in various places:

(1) The greater number, namely, those which were proved in the court of the archdeacon of Northampton, are now preserved in the Northampton probate registry. They begin nominally in 1510, though several earlier wills, presumably proved in or after 1510, are to be found among them. Between 1510 and 1558, the period with which it is proposed to deal, some 8,000 wills were proved in this court, and copies of the great majority are still extant. The various books in which they are contained are named after the letters of the alphabet.

(2) At the beginning of the last century two earlier

1 The idea of writing this paper was first suggested by a valuable series of extracts from the wills of West Kent folk, printed by Mr. Leland L. Duncan in the Transactions of the St. Paul's Ecclesiological Society in 1895. A certain number of extracts from Northamptonshire wills were given in the Archaeological Journal, livii, pp. 113-132, by the Rev. Dr. Cox, F.S.A. but the great majority of the bequests quoted in the following paper are here printed for the first time.
books belonging to this series existed, but their present whereabouts is unknown. Fortunately, however, bishop Kennett made copious extracts from them, and his notes are still preserved in the British Museum (Lansdowne MS. no. 1028).

(3) Another court in which Northamptonshire wills were proved was that presided over by the bishop’s official at Peterborough. These wills are now preserved in the Peterborough probate registry. They do not begin till 1541, but often contain interesting details, especially with regard to vestments.

(4) Wills of persons of importance, and also not infrequently of humbler folk as well, were proved in the prerogative court of Canterbury. These are now to be found at Somerset House, and are a particularly valuable source of information.

(5) The wills of a certain number of testators, especially in early days, were proved at Lincoln. Copies of these are still preserved in the Lincoln episcopal registers (memoranda books). The earliest begin in 1320, though there are some commissions for probate as early as 1280.¹

(6) A few wills of Northamptonshire folk were proved in the court of husting in London. One or two of these contain legacies of particular interest to Northamptonshire antiquaries.

In this paper it is proposed to deal mainly with legacies left to the church or to the incumbent; though many bequests towards the maintenance of the churchyard or village crosses, and to various other objects of a more or less sacred character, such as church ales, Whitsuntide processions and the like, are also included.

Bequests of articles of dress or furniture would make an interesting article by themselves, but they are perforce omitted here for want of space.

Every devout parishioner left a legacy of some kind to the high altar “for tithes and oblations forgotten or not duly done,” but as every church had a high altar,

bequests of this nature have been omitted, unless of very exceptional interest.¹

The main object of this paper is to chronicle and examine the legacies left by our forefathers to the side-chapels, altars, images and lights in our various Northamptonshire churches, for by so doing we discover what altars existed in each particular church, and which saint was most popular in any given district.

Figures or representations of the Trinity occur in various places, and most churches of any size or importance contained a Trinity chapel or altar. Altars in honour of the second Person in the Trinity were also fairly common.

A Jesus altar stood at Deene, Moulton, Potterspury, and Weedon Beck, a Jesus light at Scaldwell, a tabernacle of Jesus at Finedon, and a Jesus chapel at St. John’s, Peterborough. In numerous churches also there were chapels and altars of Corpus Christi. At Blisworth there was apparently a representation of the first Person in the Trinity, for in 1528 a parishioner left “to the Father of hevyn a pownde of wax”; and at St. Giles, Northampton, two shillings were left in 1515 “to the reparacon of the vise of the Holy Ghost.” This vise or device of the Holy Ghost doubtless refers to the dove worked on a wire at Whitsuntide. Dr. Cox in his interesting book on churchwardens’ accounts² gives several instances of this:

1510 (Louth). Robert Boston “for the Holy Gost appearing in the kirk roof, ijs.”
1540–2 (St. Mary-on-the-Hill, Chester). “Paide for wyre to sett up the holy goste, jd.”

Probably every church contained a figure of our Lady, and in most cases an altar or chapel was dedicated to her honour. Even when a church was definitely dedicated in honour of the Virgin, it often contained a lady-chapel as well. This was the case at Blakesley, Bugbrooke, Burton

¹ In the extracts from the wills printed here a large number of high-altar images and pictures are mentioned. There was always an image or mural painting of the saint to whom the church was dedicated near the high altar, and the mention of this sometimes helps us, in doubtful cases, to fix the dedication of the church.
Latimer, Rushden, Warmington and various other places.

Bugbrooke, which was dedicated in honour of the Assumption, had figures of the Assumption and of the Nativity of our Lady, both in the chancel; a chapel of our Lady, a figure of our Lady of Pity, an image of our Lady in the steeple, and also an image of our Lady "standing in the window," which may, however, be identical with one of the figures already mentioned. At Naseby, where the church was dedicated in honour of All Hallows, the same testator left legacies to our Lady in the chancel, our Lady of Pity and our Lady of Grace: our Lady of Pity being a figure of the Virgin with the dead Christ on her lap, and our Lady of Grace probably a representation of the Virgin and Child. At Great Billing, dedicated in honour of St. Andrew, there was a figure of our Lady in the chancel, and another on the south side of the church; at Little Houghton was an image of our Lady at the altar step or "grece fotte." Dallington had a figure of "our Lady by the Trinity"; Gayton "our Lady light at St. Nicholas altar"; Lois Weedon "our Lady on St. Catherine's altar"; while at Hanging Houghton there was a figure of our Lady in the window, and another "ymage called Little Mary." A figure of our Lady of the Nativity or our Lady of Bethlehem occurs in several Northamptonshire churches, and at Daventry a figure of our Lady of Bethlehem "stood over the vestry door." At Bradden a "light of our Lady in the pew" is mentioned.

SAINTS.

Chapels, altars, images, and lights in honour of the various apostles are to be found everywhere, and at

1 At Southwell minster, there were certainly two altars dedicated to our Lady as well as the high altar. The best example of these multiplied altars is at Chartres, where, in addition to the high altar, there are still altars of Notre-Dame-sous-terre (our Lady in the shrouds, as it would have been called in England), and Notre-Dame-du-pilier in the north aisle of the quire; and there also seems to have been a special devotion to the figure of our Lady in one of the windows of the south quire-aisle, still known as Notre-Dame-de-la-belle-verriere.

2 There is still a fine sculpture of the Annunciation, with the Holy Spirit overshadowing our Lady, in the south chapel at Barnack.

An alabaster image of our Lady of Pity remains at Breadsall, Derbyshire, but not in its original place; and there is a wooden "pieta" in the church of Battlefield near Shrewsbury (Trans. Shropshire Arch. Soc. 3rd. ser. vol. iii, pt. 2).
Chelveston there was a light in honour of all the apostles. St. John's, Peterborough, also had an apostles' light, and at Horton money was left towards the expense of a cloth “to kever [cover] the xij apostells.” At Blatherwycke and at Braybrooke there were representations of the twelve apostles in the rood-loft, and legacies were bequeathed for “the gilding or peantyng” of the same. Other saints which occur frequently are St. Anne, St. Catherine, St. Christopher, St. Edmund, St. George, St. Michael, St. Margaret, St. Mary Magdalen, St. Nicholas, and St. Thomas of Canterbury; while St. Helen, St. Sythe and St. Sunday (the popular name of St. Dominic) are found in many places.

Figures of St. Anthony were to be found at Great Addington, Mears Ashby, Irthlingborough, Towcester, and Wilbarston; and of St. Erasmus at Alderton, Denton, Maidwell, Middleton Cheney and Thenford. St. Giles was represented at Wadenhoe and Northampton; and St. Leonard at Apethorpe, Cotterstock, Irchester, Hardwick, Lodddington and Yardley Gobion.

St. Lawrence occurs at Marston St. Lawrence, Radstone, Stanwick and Towcester: and St. Martin at Litchborough, St. Sepulchre's (Northampton), and Stamford. St. Guthlac was represented at Marholm, Oundle and Passenham; and St. Botolph at Church Brampton, Harrington, Helpston, Heyford and St. John's, Peterborough. St. Agnes was to be found at Charwelton and Towcester; St. Gregory at Brington and Long Buckby; and St. Clement at Maidwell and St. Giles, Northampton. Other saints which occur more rarely are St. Augustine at Daventry; St. Barnabas at Spratton; St. Benedict at Glinton; St. Boniface at Brixworth; St. Blaise at Haselbeech; St. Cuthbert at Bugbrooke; St. Columba at Collingtree; St. Denys at Ravensthorpe; St. Dorothy at Middleton Cheney; St. Edward at Brixworth; and St. Edward and St. Anne at Rothwell; St. Fabian at Stoke Bruern; St. Francis at Blisworth and in the Grey Friars at Northampton. St. John of Beverley occurs at Thorpe Malsor; St. Kenelm at Wyke Dyve; St. Kyneburga, St. Kyneswitha and St. Tibba at Castor; St. Loys at Cottesbrooke; St. Modwen at Cottesbrooke and St. Sepulchre's, Northampton; St. Roch at Blisworth, and St. Roch and king Henry VI at Towcester; St. Reginer at St. Peter's, Northampton; St. Rumbold at Stoke Doyle; St. Stephen at Badby; St. Sebastian at Stoke Bruern; St. Werburga at Weedon Beck; St. Wilfrid at Guilsborough; and St. Winifred at Walgrave.

At one or two places there was a comprehensive representation of all the saints. Thus at Holdenby there was an "image of All Hallows," and at Pytchley a "picture of All Hallows." The exact form which these representations took is quite uncertain.

At Deene, Fotheringhay and Kingsthorpe there was a "light of All Souls"; and at Middleton Cheney a light of the three kings of Cologne.

At Harpole there was a canopy light; at Chacombe a maidens' light; and a plough light at Lutton, Northborough, Tichmarsh and Warmington.

The "maidens' light" was doubtless a light maintained by the spinsters of the parish, just as the "plough light" was kept up by the ploughmen.

At Ashton a legacy was left in 1545 "to the light to (sic) comyth downe at the elevation"; and at Potterspury in 1557 a testator bequeathed 20d. "to the light that cometh downe before the blessed Sacrament."

At Fotheringhay stood an interesting altar to which various testators left legacies, styled "the alter of all benefactors within the church of Fotheringhay." 1 The "autentical altar" which occurs in many Raunds wills, and has puzzled several antiquaries, was only another name for the high altar. 2

THE TORCHES.

The torches, or serges, were great candles found more or less in profusion in all our English pre-reformation churches. They were burnt by the side of the body during the obsequies, and at the requiem mass. They were not of pure wax, and were brown in colour, owing to the large proportion of resin, in some cases nearly half, used in their manufacture. The wealthier members

1 No doubt this was the "works altar," where, as at Lincoln, mass was said for all contributing to the fabrica.

2 For further information on the subject of the "autentical altar" see page 396, n. 6.
of society provided their own torches for their funerals, but it was usual for each parish to provide a certain number ready for the burial of the poorer classes. These were used not only for funeral purposes, but also for burning on special occasions before the various altars.

Almost all mediaeval wills contain a legacy towards the maintenance of "the torches"; and in numerous instances one or more new torches were bequeathed to a church. The will of J. Pye of Walgrave is a good example of this, and serves also to show the double purpose for which torches were used. The testator bequeatheth "to the church of Walgrave so miche money as will by oone torche, the wiche I will be used yn the administracon of the blessed sacrament, & at pore mens buryalls."

The cost of these torches varied considerably owing doubtless to the differences in their size and quality. Thus an Arthingworth parishioner in 1501 left to the church two torches costing 6s; and a Culworth man in 1521 bequeathed "xxs. to bye a cowpull of wax torchys." In 1528 Thomas Mylner left 4s. to buy a torch for Cottesbrooke church, and in the same year a like amount was left to purchase one for the church of Duston.

In 1528 J. Silbe bequeathed 6s. 8d. to the church of Cranford St. Andrew for two torches, and in 1541 a parishioner of Haselbech provided by his will "that a torche be gyvyn to the churche price of ijs." The usual price, however, seems to have been on an average 3s. 4d. apiece. A Church Brampton will of 1528 gives us some idea of the weight of the torches. Richard Cosby bequeatheth "to the churche ij torchis of waxe in wayght xiiiij powndes."

As has been already stated, the parish officials frequently made the candles themselves; and the poorest members of society usually left something towards the cost. In 1511 a Glinton man bequeathed three pounds of wax to help to make four torches for the church; at Croughton Sir Edward Harbotell bequeathed twelve pence "to the makyng of the torches"; and Richard Langley of Finedon left "towards the makyng of the torches vijs."

A few other legacies relating to torches are given as examples of what may be found in almost any mediaeval will:
THE PARISH CHURCHES AND

1530. "To the torche light iijs. iiijd": John Stacie of Dallington.
1538. "For the wayst of wax at my buryall xxd": S. Symonds of Stanford.
1547. "To the mayntenance of the torches a strike of malte": Richard Lawe of Chelveston.

THE FABRIC OF THE CHURCH.

From a careful perusal of early wills we learn the exact date at which various portions of our Northamptonshire churches were built. Thus we gather from the will of John Bacon that Easton Neston church was almost entirely rebuilt about the year 1436. At Marholm we learn that the chancel was rebuilt just a century later, for in 1534 Sir William Fitzwilliam, kt. left his body to be buried in the new chancel at Marholm which "I have late caused to be made & newly edified ther." In 1495 a certain John Chambre proposed to build an additional

1 In this instance the chancel was referred to, but it is well to note that the words "chancel" and "quire" were used indiscriminately in mediaeval days of any chapel of a church irrespective of position. The following are good examples:

Testamenta Eboracensia (Surtees Soc.), ii, 92: Joh. Radclyff, citizen and merchant of York (1444), leaves his body to be buried "in ecclesia mea parochiali sanctae crucis in Fossegate, in choro beatæ Mariae Virginis ibidem."

Wm. Bothe's "chancel" at Southwell was a chapel opening from the western bays of the south aisle. In the will of Robert Batemanson, 1512, it is called "My lord William Bothe's quer" (see Leach, Visitations and Memorials of Southwell [Camden Soc.], p. 115. Richmondshire Wills (Surtees Soc.), p. 32: William Shepherd of Elsington, Kendal (1542). "My bodye to be buryede within my paradise churche of Kendall, in the quere off Saynt Anthonye, whiche William Herryson and I fownded in ye same churche."

ibid. p. 113: John Brockall of Richmond, last chantry priest at the altar of St. Anne (east end of north aisle) in Richmond church (1558). "My body to be buryed in the churche of the said Richmond, in my chauncell." [On p. 194 the chancel proper of the same church is called the "hye quere." The expressions summus chorus and principalis chorus constantly occur in mediaeval documents].

At Grantham the large chantry chapel in which (till 1830), the alderman or chief officer of the borough was elected, was always known as the Corpus Christi quire.
chapel in the church of Spratton, and a lady bequeathed her lands in Spratton towards the expense. If the chapel was not built the legacy was to go to the poor. In 1500 the people of Blakesley were building an aisle of our Lady in their church, towards the cost of which a parishioner left 6s. 8d.

In 1511 a new quire was built at Glinton, towards the cost of which one of the parishioners left a small legacy. From other wills we learn that a new porch was being built at Potterspury in 1510, and another at Moreton Pinkney in 1512. At about the same date the chancel of Brington was rebuilt by Sir John Spencer. The work was almost completed at the time of his death in 1522, but he left 160 “to the making of the chauncell roofe with the ledde, walls & wyndowes, & my armes to be sett in the same wyndowes.” Four years later a parishioner left 10s. “towards the rebuilding of the parochial church of Canons Ashby” (i.e. the nave of the conventual church which was used as a parish church).

At Preston Capes legacies were left in 1522 and 1528 to the making of the north aisle; and at Bugbrooke in 1530 towards the building of the lady-chapel. At Wootton the north side of the church was being repaired in 1528; and in 1532 a parishioner left 20s. “to the bwyldyng of the body of the chirch.” In 1527 and 1528 the roof of St. Sepulchre’s, Northampton, was being re-leaded; at Tichmarsh the roof of the church was undergoing the same process in 1533. In each case parishioners left money to defray the expense. In 1536 money was left towards the cost of building the church roof of Walgrave; and in 1545 we find a bequest for a similar object at Creaton.

The “steeples” or towers of various Northamptonshire churches were evidently undergoing extensive repairs at the beginning of the sixteenth century. In 1510 a parishioner of Warkworth left two strike of malt and two sheep “to the beldyng off the stepyll”; and another parishioner in 1531 bequeathed £10 for the same object. At Helmdon

1 The word fabrica in Latin wills means a standing fabric fund, and the words “building” and even “rebuilding” in English wills very often appear to refer to the same thing. “Rebuilding” at any rate means no more than “repairing”; and there seems little doubt that the “rebuilding of the steple” at Raunds simply means that money was left to a fund for repairs which the churchwardens administered.
in 1510 we find the same story. There a certain Edward Coope left £4 to the bell-tower, if they build it higher: if not, 20s. only. The “steeple” of Wold was being rebuilt or repaired between the years 1512 and 1519. Several small bequests were left for the purpose in 1512, and in 1517 a Stanford man left £5 towards the building of the steeple of Wold beside Walgrave. In 1519 the work was evidently nearing completion, for Richard Arnold left “xvj whethers of the seconde sortte & iiij ewys of the same sortte to the glasynge of the steple wyndo of Wold.” Another member of the same family left “to the byldyng of the steple ij of the best peces of oke in my yard” (1519); and in the same year a third member of the Arnold family bequeathed “to the byldyng of the stepyll xls. so that the xxs. of my promyse to the byldyng of the stepyll be of none effect.” At Raunds important work was also going on, and in 1514 Henry Andrew, priest, left 40s. “ad re-edificacionem campanilis.” In 1517 Henry Tawyer bequeathed “to the re-edyfying of the stepyll of Randes iii li. xii js. iiijd. more & besyde the performance of the first promys ye wych aperyth in the chyrch bokys & rotells.”

It was the same at Rushton St. Peter in 1520; Whilton in 1521; Rothwell in 1528; Desborough in 1529; Cransley between 1537 and 1540; and Great Doddington in 1539. In each of these instances one or more legacies were left for “the building of the steeple.”

THE ROOD.

In mediaeval days every church had its rood and rood-screen, and in the period with which we are chiefly concerned (1450-1558), a rood-loft as well. In several of our Northamptonshire churches there was more than one rood. Thus, at Benefield, in addition to the high rood there was a “red rood”; at Woodford a “green rood”; at Geddington a “stooping rood”; at Wold a

1 In most of these cases the evidence for any actual rebuilding of the steeple at these dates is controverted by the architecture. Desborough and Cransley, the latest examples, seem to be entirely of the fifteenth century. The bequest at Rothwell may refer to the making of the belfry windows, which are certainly late.
rood in the lady-chapel; and at Wilby, Tichmarsh, Milton Malsor and Little Addington a rood in the north aisle.

Almost every parishioner in pre-reformation days left a legacy to the maintenance of the lights before the rood; and bequests to defray the cost of painting or gilding the rood-loft are very common: at Braybrooke and Blatherwycke money was left for the gilding of the twelve apostles in the rood-loft; and at Irchester in 1500 a testator instructed his executors to cause a window to be made to light the rood-loft, on the south side. At Eydon "two mastelyn basons" were left to the rood-loft; and at Hardwick "a paynted clothe, price ijs." In 1523 a Naseby parishioner bequeathed "vjs. viijd. to buy candlesticks for the rood," and there are several other bequests of a like nature. At All Saints, Northampton, and Higham Ferrers there were rood-chapels; at Tichmarsh a rood-altar; and at Maxey there was an altar on the rood-loft, the piscina belonging to which still remains, high up in the wall.

In 1518 a rood-screen was being erected at Little Oakley towards which John Smyth gave "a pece of tymber to the valor of xijd." Early in the sixteenth century the parishioners of Geddington had provided a new rood-screen, and apparently sold the old one, for in 1536 a parishioner leaves to the parish the old rood-screen which remained in the church at that date.

In 1533 the parishioners of Cottesbrooke determined to regild their screen, and made an agreement with a certain John Handros, "weyferyngman," to do the work. He died unfortunately before the work was completed, but his will furnishes us with interesting details as to the cost and method of procedure. The testator recites that "I have made a bargayn with the townshipp of Cottysbroke for a parte of ther rode lofte for vij li. vjs. viijd. of the which I have receyved xls. in parte of payment thereof, & I have orderyde gold sylver byse oyle w' all other thyng thereto for to gyld the seyd parte of the roode lofte w' all, & yff God doo hys will by me att thys tyme I gyff the townshyppe of Cottesbroke the seide golde sylver byse oyle w' with all other thyng thereto belonging so that thei pay me iiiij nobles more for to pay for my ber[yng] & to reward them that take a peyne with me in my syknes."
THE EASTER SEPULCHRE.

A necessary adjunct to every English mediaeval church was the Easter Sepulchre. It was a small chest or receptacle in which, on Maunday Thursday or Good Friday, was deposited the Host, enclosed in a pyx, together with a cross. This "sepulchre" was placed usually, if not invariably, on the north side of the chancel and was constantly watched till dawn on Easter day, when the pyx was taken out and replaced upon the altar. The sepulchre was usually of wood, though in many cases permanent stone receptacles were made for it, of which very beautiful examples are still to be found in Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire churches. Perhaps the best specimen in Northamptonshire is that of Twywell; but there are other examples at Cogenhoe, Flore, Watford and elsewhere.

The position of the sepulchre is indicated to a certain extent by two Northamptonshire wills. John Tresham in 1520 left his body "to be buried in the chancell by the sepulcr" (Rushton St. Peter's); and Thomas Plowright, vicar of Raunds (1546), desired to be buried "betwene ye sepulcre foytt (foot), & ye marble stone before ye autentecall aulter" (i.e. the high altar).

The sepulchre was renewed from time to time and the Northamptonshire wills contain various bequests with this object. Thus in 1506 a Boddington man left a legacy "fabricacioni sepulchri"; and William Plowright in 1523 bequeathed 13s. 4d. "to ye makyng of a new sepulcre" for the church of Burton Latimer. In 1537 Richard Selby left 6s. 8d. to the making of the sepulchre at Cranford St. John's; and several legacies were left in 1529 and 1530 "to the makyng of a newe sepulchre in the church of Sent Nicolas of Helmyden." The same thing had evidently happened at Gedddington, for in 1536

1 See Cox, English Church Furniture, p. 74. There is a detailed account of the service at the sepulchre early on Easter morning in Dr. Mansel Symson's article on Easter Sepulchres in Assoc. Archit. Soc. Reports, xxvii, 290-296. In the ordinances for Sibthorpe college, Notts. 1342-1343 (York Reg. Zouche, fo. 100), two tapers are directed to be burned in the chancel by the sepulchre of our Lord from the ninth hour of Good Friday till after the end of the service of the Resurrection on Easter day.
Thomas Freeman bequeathed "to the use of the church (of Geddington) the oolde sepulcr there." Sometimes the sepulchre needed repairing, and bequests to meet the expense frequently occur. The following examples may be quoted:

1499. "To the peyntyng of the sepulcre": Thomas West of Hanging Houghton.
1526. "To the reparacon of the sepulcher howse": Richard Haresse of Hellidon.
1528. "To the gyldyng of the sepulture of Bugbroke xxd": J. Freeman.
1528. "To the gyldynge of the sepulcre xxs": Thomas Walter of Cransley.

In 1516 Thomas Hunt of Cransley bequeathed "to the preparyng & furnyschyng of the sepulcur x hewe schype (ewe sheep) . . . & that the increase of them may be to the supportacion of the same." For the maintenance of the sepulchre almost every parishioner left some legacy. Out of many thousands of such bequests the following will serve as examples:

1500. "To the sepulcre light ij lib. waxe unmade": Sir John Chese, rector of Broughton.
1514. "To the meyntenyng of the sepulture lythe half a quarter of barley": John Wisman of Great Billing.
1519. "I bequeth x bee hyvys to meynteyn the sepulture light, which x bee hyves shall be in the custody of ye chyrch wardens": Sir John Pollard, parson of Luddington in the Brook.
1519. "To the sepulcr every yer xijd. to be payd on Passyon Sunday as long as my father in lawe in lawe lyffs, & after hys deyth I gyffe a kowgh to the meyntenyng of the seyd sepulcr lyght": John Arnold of Wold.
1523. "To the supportacon of the sepulcr lyett xijd": W. Dunmow of Harringworth.
1537. "And if there be any wax saved yerely that then I will it be gyven to the sepulcre there to be to the mending of the tapers there spent at Easter": Richard Cave of Stanford.
1543. "I gyve unto the sepulker lyght a browne cowe of the value of xijs. the whych cowe I wyll schulde be sett unto one pore man my nebur, & he to pay yerely for the same cowe & callffe unto the churche-wardyns apon mydlent Sunday yerely xxd": T. Goodman of Bradden.

The following more unusual legacies in connexion with the sepulchre may be given here. In 1500 Henry Willysams bequeathed to the church of Stanford "my coverlet to the use of the sepulcre"; and in the same year, Basilla Laxton, another parishioner of Stanford, left to the sepulchre in the same church a sheet (unum lynthyamen). In 1518 Alice Smith left to the church of Woodford-cum-membbris “a charpett to the crose for to lay on the sepulcur.”

SEATS.

At the close of the fifteenth century Geddington church was being re-seated, and in 1486 Henry German ordered his executors “quod de bonis meis fiant nova sedilia per totam ecclesiam secundum formam quam carpentarius cepit facienda.”

In 1528 the church of Wold was provided with seats, towards which several parishioners left small legacies. In the same year the rector made the following bequest: “I bequeth, yf my neyburs kepe ther promes to lett my seattes in the chancell be made with theyres, according as they have allway lovingly promysed me, xxs. to helpe forth ther bargen.”

Three years later the people of Staverton were erecting seats in their church, and in 1531 W. Fallance left “to the setts in the church iijs. iiijd.”

From a post-reformation will we learn that the interesting fifteenth-century quire-stalls now at Tansor came originally from Fotheringhay. By his will, dated 1601, Robert Hickes, rector of Tansor, bequeaths “to the church of Tansor all those my seats now scituate in the same which I brought from Fodringham (sic).”

THE ALTAR.

With regard to the altar one or two interesting legacies may be quoted. In 1530 John Parvyn left to the chapel of St. John in the church of All Saints, Northampton, his “aulter, the which aulter is garnished with burnyshed golde, sett golde & with ymagery worke.” In 1546 Thomas Knottisford, vicar of Weekley, left to Weekley church a

1 The forms “St. Pulcar” or “St. Pulker,” which so often occur in these Northamptonshire wills, seem to indicate that the popular accent in the middle ages was on the second syllable of “sepulchre.”
"halowed super altare"; and a few years later (1558) William Rufforth, parson of Ufford, bequeathed to his parish church "the table that standeth upon the high altar." In 1529 a parishioner of Cranford St. John left "a stryke of barley to make a woltt (vault) over ye tabyll of ye hie aultuer," by which was probably meant a stone canopy over the reredos or "tabyll."

The religious changes brought about by the accession of Edward VI, Mary, and Elizabeth are suggested by bequests in three Northamptonshire wills. Edmund Perwyche of Wold in 1550 leaves "to ye hyght aultuer & now callyd the table of our Lord xijd." On the accession of queen Mary the old altars were restored, and J. Gybbons, vicar of Dodford, by will dated 1553, bequeathes "toward the re-edyfying of the aulters in Peterborough church xxs. so that they be buylded up agayne before Easter next comyng."

On the accession of Elizabeth "the Lord's table" again took the place of the high altar. The new term, however, was not very familiar, and we find B. Overend of Brackley leaving a bequest "to the hye table in Seynt Peter's." (20th March, 1560-1).

PLATE, ETC.

Legacies for the purchase of plate occur very frequently. The following will serve as examples: In 1526 Sir W. Adson, parson of Chipping Warden, left "to the paryshe church of Sent Leonard in Rokyngham lijs. iiiijd. to by a challys wyth"; and at West Haddon £3 was bequeathed by a parishioner in 1536 for a like object. Ten years later (1546) William Hatton of Holdenby left "to ye church at Holdenbye one chalys, price vli. wych I wyll mye executors shall rere & make off soche part off mye stuff that then I shall hapen to have, & may be best spared." In the will of Nicholas Woodhull of Warkworth occurs the following provision: "I will yt all my broken sylver & gold shall helpe to make a larger chales for this church."

Cruets for wine and water. In addition to the chalice and paten, various other altar-vessels are referred to in the wills we are considering. In 1379 John Pyel left to the church of Irthlingborough two cruets of silver to contain the wine and water used in the Sacrament; and in 1421 Peter Mabawe bequeathed to Fotheringhay church "unum par de cruettys." In 1474 a testator left to the church of Naseby "two cruets of pewter (\textit{duobus cruettis de pewter}), price 12d"; and in 1515 two silver cruets were bequeathed to the black friars' church in Northampton by Sir Everard Fielding, kt.

Censers. In 1450 Joan Bukland bequeathed to the church of Edgcote "a encensure withe a shipe therto, both of sylver"; and in 1522, 6s. 8d. was left to the church of Corby "to bye withall a payre of censoures." In 1533 John Cave left "to Ketering church a paier of silvir sencers, the price of vli. att the leaste."

Thuribles and Holy Water Vessels. In 1383 John de Lyons of Warkworth bequeathed to his parish church a silver vessel for the holy water with a sprinkler. He also left a thurible "of laton" to one of the Cambridge friaries.

Pyx. In 1368 Gervase de Wilford, rector of Barnack, left to the church of Barnack a pyx silver gilt and enamelled within and without (\textit{aymellata intus et foris}). In 1498 a parishioner of Byfield bequeathed 3s. 4d. "pixidi ad portandum Corpus Christi supra summum altare." Twelve years later (1510) Edward Coope left a pyx of silver to the church of Helmdon of the value of 20s. In 1525 a new pyx was required for the church of Croughton, and several parishioners left small legacies to meet the cost. In the following year Henry Goodwyn left 40s. to the church of Irchester "toward the bying & perchesyng of a pyxe of sylver & gylte to ley the blessed sacrament or body of our Lord Jhu Cryste in [in] the church aforesaid, there to remayn for ever"; and in 1545 a legacy was left to the church of Wadenhoe "to the makyng of the pyxe hangyng over the highe [altar]." In 1531 John Olyver of Islip left "to the byeng of a canapye & a picks for the sacrament xxvjs. viijd," and a "canopye for the pixe" was left to the church of Walgrave in 1533 at a cost of 6s.

Canopy. In 1519 John Pratt left to the church of Brayfield "a canape to hang over the holy & blessyd sacrament,” and two years later Richard Ingram bequeathed “to the sacrament of the church of Broughton one canopy of blake shylke.” At Stowe-nine-churches a parishioner in 1532 bequeathed 10s. “to bye a cloth to bere over the holie sacrament on Corpus Xti daye, & at all other tymes nedefull”; and eight years later 6s. 8d. was left to the same parish “to bye a canopye for the sacrament.”

Pax. Another article of plate closely connected with the Sacrament was the pax or osculatorium, a small tablet of ivory, or wood overlaid with gold or silver, or of some baser metal, used in the western Church for giving the kiss of peace. The rule of Sarum was to send the pax just before communion to all the faithful present, who by kissing it, received the kiss of peace. In England it was usually called the “paxbrede,” as in the will of Peter Mabawe who, in 1421, left to the church of Fotheringhay “unum paxebred”; and in that of John Pyel who left a paxe-brede of silver to Irthlingborough. Various other references to the pax are to be found in these Northamptonshire wills. Thus in 1368 Gervase de Wilford left to the church of Barnack a great painted board for giving the pax in church (“magna tabula pro pace danda in ecclesia depicta”). John Dove in 1522 bequeathed to Kingsthorpe church “a pax, price xxd”; and a pax was left to the lady-chapel of Cottingham church in 1529. In 1545 Richard Daundelen left 10s. to the church of Raunds for the purchase of “ij paxes gyltyd”; and in 1555 Edward Giffard of Wicken left “a greate paxe of copper” to the church of Wyke Dyve.

Crosses. Legacies for the purchase of crosses frequently occur. Thus John Berby in 1467 left £3 6s. 8d. “to by therwith a convenient crosse to serve in the parish chirch of Cherwelton”; and in 1510 £8 was left to purchase a new cross for the church of Burton Latimer. A very costly gift was that of Richard Daundelen who, in 1545, left £20 to the church of Raunds “to by a crosse sylinder gyltyd & inhamellyd.”

2 There is now a fine mediaeval proces- sional cross at Lamport, but it is very doubtfull whether it belonged originally to this church.
Hand-bells. These bells are mentioned in one or two wills. In 1512 Thomas Bailey of Stanford-on-Avon left “to the church toward byynge off ther hand bells xijd.” In 1557 an inhabitant of Thorpe Malsor bequeathed his “best wether shepe towards the buying of ij hand bells for the church.” The will of Edward Giffard of Wicken (1555) shows the way in which these bells were used. “I give unto the parisshe churche of Sainctt James in Wiken two brasen hande bells to ringe before there banners at precession, & other times necessarie.”

Candlesticks. In 1492 “ij candilstikks of laten, price xvjs. viijd.” were left to the high altar of Alderton; and in 1520 a parishioner instructed his executors to provide “ij grett laten candylstyccks for to stond before the hye alter” of Glapthorne. In 1523 Wm. Plowright of Burton Latimer left to the high altar of his parish church “ij laten candelstickys of ye price of xiijs. iiiijd”; and in 1533 Thomas Baron bequeathed to the neighbouring church of Rushden £10 “to by a pair of sylver candelsticks withall.” In 1545 “ij smale pricket candylstyckes for ye children to bere at prosesyon” were provided for the church of Raunds at a cost of 3s. 4d. by the will of Richard Daundelen.

Basins. In 1512 Alice Moles left to the chapel of Ringstead “unam pelvim auricalcam ad lavandum reliquias sanctorum”; and in the following year a testator left to the high altar of East Carlton church “one newe bason of pewter.” In 1514 Robert Shefford left the following handsome benefaction to the church of All Saints, Northampton: “I will & gyve ij basons with ij ewers of sylver to the hyghe aulter worth by estimacon xl marcks.” In 1521 a testator left to Brington church “a charger to wasch ther hands when chyldryn be crystenyd”; and five years later (1526) “a basson & a lavar” were bequeathed to the font of the neighbouring church of Holdenby, doubtless for a similar purpose.

Lectern. In 1521 Agnes Arnold left 6s. 8d. “to the bying off a lectryne of latten” for Wold church; and in the following year John Gun bequeathed 20s. “to ye byynge of a lectarnre brase” for the church of Benefield.
In 1568 T. Mowmforthe, parson of Aldwinkle All Saints, left his body to be buried in the chancel "directly in the myddest of the same under the stone that the lecterne was customed to stand uppon."

VESTMENTS.

Bequests of vestments, or of sums of money towards their purchase, are of constant occurrence in these Northamptonshire wills. The following are typical examples: In 1417 John Honnyngham, archdeacon of Durham, left ten marks to the church of Walgrave "ad usum et facturam unius vestimenti integri principalis cum capa, et apparatibus diacono et subdiacono convenientibus pro summo altari." In 1467 Alice Mortimer bequeathed to the church of Upton, near Northampton, a "cheseble of blue velvett with a crosse of rede velvett, an aube, & amys with all the orfrays to the same." In 1471 Richard Rawlyn left "to the church of Kyslyngbury my grene vestyment wrought with selver, & with a blewe crosse & flowres of gold." In 1506 Maryon Thorpe bequeathed to the high altar of Higham Ferrers "a vestment, & also for the decon & subdecon of oon sewte, of the value of lijs. iiiijd." In 1521 a parishioner of Irchester left 26s. 8d. "to bye a blacke vestyment. Item for a lenton vestyment xxvjs. viijd." In the following year Sir John Spencer, kt. who had been rebuilding the chancel of Brington, bequeathed to the church one whole suit of vestments and a chalice gilt, at a cost of £4. In 1533 W. Tithe left to the church of Northborough "oon white sarceynett vestment, price xxvjs. viijd. & ytt to be delyvered by the feast of estur."

In 1535 the church officials of Kettering received a legacy of "a cope or a vestment of white silke as they shall thinke best, the price x marks or vijli." Another parishioner in 1546 left "twoo whyte tunacles of white damaske & my best vestmente to the aulter of Saint John in Ketteringe churche." In 1539 Robert Clark bequeathed to the church of Boughton "a whyte vestment for Lent with the aube & corporase. Also to the sayd church one rachet." In queen Mary's days (1558) Thomas Latham

In 1523 Nicholas Vaux, lord Harrowden, ordered his executors “to bye twenty vestments to be geven to xx pour churches about Harowdon & Norton”; and Sir Richard Knightley of Fawsley, by will dated 1538, to the intent that God’s service may be the better maintained, left a vestment of the value of 20s, or 20s. to buy one, to the churches of Badby, Braunston, Byfield, Catesby, Charwelton, Everdon, Farthingstone, Fawsley, Hellidon, Litchborough, Newnham, Norton, Plumpton, Preston Capes, Stowe, Weedon, and Woodford.

Legacies for the provision or purchase of copes are equally numerous. The cost of them varied considerably Thus a Helmdon man left 20s. in 1498 “ad empicionem unius cape.” In 1506 Dr. Henry Rudd left “to the church of Pychele to by therewith a coope x marcs.” At Sulgrave in 1518 J. Stevyns bequeathed the sum of £6 13s. 4d. “for to bye a good coope”; and W. Margetts, of Rushden, in 1537 left £5 “to bye a cope or vestyment.”

Four years later Thomas Hensman of Ecton ordered his executors to expend £8 upon “a cope of blue velvet for my parish church.” Sometimes, however, the whole parish contributed towards the cost of these vestments, as was the case at Naseby, where, in the years 1529 and 1530, various parishioners bequeathed small sums of money for the purchase of a new cope.

These legacies did not always take the form of money. In 1498 Edward, earl of Wiltshire, whose fine tomb is still to be seen at Lowick, left to one church “the outside of my gown of crimson velvet to make a cope.” Another church was to have “the lining of black damask to make a vestment and a cope.” In 1531 Nicholas Woodhull bequeathed to the church of Warkworth “a gown of black saten to make therof a cope, or an other ornament to be hadd to the honor of God in the same church. Allso I will that my wiff’s apparell shall be made in vestyments & ornaments of the church.”

The finest set¹ of vestments which we have noticed in these wills is that bequeathed by Cecily, duchess of York, to the church of Fotheringhay. These were made mainly of crimson velvet and cloth of gold, and must have been as beautiful as they were costly.

Albs. In 1537 Margaret Bithery left a flaxen sheet to the church of Wellingborough to make an alb; and similar bequests occur in one or two other wills in different parts of the county. At Overstone a parishioner in 1512 left 5s. “to bye an albe for ye chyrch & to repayre other parte of ye vestments”; and in 1533 Thos. Grene bequeathed to St. Margaret chapel at Chapel Brampton “oon albe.”

Rochets. This vestment was closely akin to the surplice. Lyndewode says: “Rochetum . . . differt a superpelliceo, quia superpelliceum habet manicas pendulas, sed rochetum est sine manicas, et ordinatur pro clerico ministraturo sacerdoti, vel forsan ad opus ipsius sacerdotis in baptizando pueros ne per manicas ipsius brachia impediantur.” In quires, or at least in those of old foundation, clerks ministering at the altar used albs, but in parish churches the rochet was generally used. It was sleeved sometimes, but its sleeves were close, and not hanging like those of a surplice.² Bequests of rochets occur very rarely in Northamptonshire wills, but one was left to the church of Boughton in 1539 by Robert Clark (clerk).

Surplices. For the provision of surplices many bequests were left. It will be sufficient here to quote four examples. In 1513 Philip Page bequeathed to the church of East Carlton “iiij ells of lynyn cloth to make a surples”; and in 1529 another parishioner left to the same church “ij shets to make a surples withal.” In 1546 Thomas Plowright, vicar of Raunds, leaves “unto ye makyng of a surplys a pare of mye best shetts”; and in the same year a neighbouring vicar, Thomas Knottisford of Weekley, leaves “a surples with sleves” to his parish church. A “sleved surplice” is also mentioned in a Peterborough will in 1530.

Altar cloths, frontals, dorsals and riddles. One of the commonest bequests is that of a sheet or a tablecloth for an altar-cloth. Thus, in 1540, Elizabeth Nycolls left "to the church of Thrapston one of my best tabel clothes to make an aultur cloth for the yhe auter"; and there are scores of similar legacies. In 1526 a parishioner left to the church of Croughton "as fine a painted cloth as may be gotten to hang before the high altar"; and there are exactly similar bequests to the churches of Whitfield (1527) and Thornby (1528). In 1531 W. Locker bequeathed to the high altar of Warmington "an hangyng aulter clothe so good as can be bought for xs. except my man can make ytt better."

In the same year a parishioner left to the church of Cosgrove "iiiij bushell of barley to bye a paynted clothe to hang before the high aulter"; and in 1544 T. Dobbs bequeathed 5s. to the high altar of Braybroke "to bye a cloth to the more bewtie thereof, & to the honor of God being there."

In most mediaeval churches a cloth of more or less richness hung against the wall above the altar, which was known as the upper frontal or dorsal. The cloth in front of the altar, to which the name frontal is now generally applied, was known as the nether or lower frontal. At the ends of the altars it was usual to have curtains or "riddels," generally of light material, hung on rods projecting from the east wall, and at right-angles to it. References to each of these articles of altar furniture are found in the Northamptonshire wills. Joan Bukland in 1450 left to the church of Edgcote "a grene apparielle for the auter, that is to say reredose & frontelle powdred withe golde, & ij rydellis of grene tarteryne. Item ij apparelle of white for the ij auters with rydellis for Lente."

Houseling cloths. In 1511 Isabella Lewelyn bequeathed to the church of Towcester “a towell of diaper of xiiij yards length to hosyll people”; and Jane Brafield (1522) left her “grett diaper towell to be a houslyng cloth in Saint Gyles’ church (Northampton).” Cecile Smyth of East Carlton (1529) bequeathed “a towell clote for to serve parysshoners wytheall when they take ther ryghtts of the church at Ester & other tymes.” And Anne Shefford (1546) left “a towell for ye howslyng bord.”

CORPORASES. Bequests of kerchiefs for making corporases are fairly common. The following are three typical examples: Joan Robinson in 1526 bequeathes her “best kerchiff to ye highe altare of Seynt Gregory (Northampton) to make a corporax.” Margaret Bythery (1537) leaves her “best kercheffe to make a corporas clothe” for the church of Wellingborough; and Anne Shepard of Wilbarston leaves an exactly similar bequest. The will of Jane Brafield of St. Giles, Northampton, contains the following provision: “I give a pair of tires of myne of gold perlid, & to put serteine of my curalle perls (coral pearls) apone it, to be made by my sone for a corperasse case”; and in 1558 W. Butler of Preston Capes leaves his “tynsill doblet to make corporas cases.”

CHRYSom CLOths AND CAreCLoTHs. The carecloth was a sort of veil held over the heads of newly-married couples when they received the blessing. The chrysom cloth was a linen kerchief placed on the head of the infant after the unction which used to follow baptism. Both of these cloths are referred to in one or two Northamptonshire wills. Micklethwaite in his Ornaments of the Rubric (p. 49) says that the chrysom might not be turned to common use. The following legacy, however, would appear to prove that this rule was not always observed. In 1531 Thos. Sergeant, vicar of St. Giles, Northampton, left “to every preste dwelling within the college of All Hallows goinge to the comons a crysom to be ther napkyns.”

TOWELS. W. Nicoll of Oundle (1522) gives “to the hye alter a towell to wype ye prests hands with”; and Henry Langley of Little Harrowden leaves the following bequest: “I bequethe my best towell to hange in the roode lofte. Item I bequeath my worst towell to hange at the hye aulter to serve the preste at washinge his hands before ye sacringe & after.”

LENTEN VEILS. During the season of Lent a veil was hung across the chancel in front of the altar. The hooks or spikes from which the Lenten veil was suspended are still to be seen in the cathedral churches of Salisbury and Ripon; and in Wenlock, Shillington (Beds.), and several other churches. References to this custom are found in several Northamptonshire wills. The following is a good example: In 1517 Richard Blofeyld left 3s. 4d. to the church of All Saints, Irthlingborough, “for to bye a vayell to hang befor the hy auter.” In a Scaldwell will of the time of queen Mary we find the following somewhat quaint bequest: “I bequeath to the church of Scaldwell ij flaxen sheates sumwhat wore to make a vayle withall.”

OTHER CLOTHS FOR LENT. It was customary during Lent to cover up the great rood and all pictures and images, and entries of sheets or cloths for the purpose are common in inventories. Probably the following bequests had reference to this custom: “I bequeth a ewe lamb & xijd. towards a cloth to kever the xij apostells”: J. Launden of Horton, 1509. “To our Lady of Wittlbury ij ells of brode cloth to be drawne upon wyre befor hir”: R. Fennymore, 1522.

BANNERS AND CROSS CLOTHS. Agatha Dunstall of Northampton in 1464 leaves fourpence “ad unum vexillum sancti Martini emendum.” Isabel Mylner, by her will dated 1514, gives to the church of Spratton “a banner clothe which shalbe better than any in the churche.” From this we may conclude that even a small country church could boast several banners. In the following year Richard Prentis of Aldwinkle All Saints leaves a bequest “ad emcionem unius vexilli pro principali cruce ecclesie.” In 1521 T. Skynner of Creaton bequeathes 6s. 8d. “for a baner cloth for the crosse”; and six years later (1527) a Daventry parishioner leaves a like amount for “a banner of the pyctor of Saint George to be borne on the crosse daies.”

In 1542 Margaret Parker leaves to the church of Holdenby "a banner clothe the pryce of vs"; three years later an Ashton man desires his wife to "bye a sylken banner for the crosse"; and in 1546 a Guilsborough parishioner leaves 20s. to be bestowed on a silk streamer.

A somewhat similar bequest is that of William Bawston of Bulwick, who, by will dated 1498, left to the church of Bulwick "a coverlet of rede & yalowe to be born before the crosse on Palme Sondaye, & to lye before the hyghe awter every principall feste."

BOOKS.

For conducting the services in a mediaeval parish church the following books were necessary: (1) The missal or mass book. (2) The gradual or grayle. (3) The breviary or portiforium. (4) The antiphonarium. (5) The processionale or processioner. (6) The manuale.

(1) The missal contained the mass, so far as the text was concerned. The epistles and gospels, being read from separate lecterns, were often contained in separate books called respectively epistolarium and evangeliarium.

(2) The gradual or grayle contained the musical portions of the mass. The book was so called from one of the principal elements being the responsorium graduale, or respond to the lectio epistolae.

(3) The breviary or portiforium contained the hour services, which were said by the clergy either in quire or in private. It was known in England by various names: portas, portuasse, porteuisse, and several other variants.

(4) The antiphonarium or antiphoner contained the musical portions of the breviary. The anthem books of our cathedrals, and the hymn books of our parish churches, are the direct successors of this book.

(5) The processionale or processioner contained the litanies and hymns sung in procession.

(6) The manuale contained the occasional services, which in pre-reformation days were much more numerous than now. Among others may be mentioned the ceremonies of Candlemas, Ash Wednesday, and Palm Sunday, besides what were formerly known as the sacramental services, of baptism, marriage, and visitation of the sick.\(^1\)

All the books above mentioned are frequently referred to in our Northamptonshire wills.

(1) The Missal or Mass Book. John Chauntrell, by will dated 1509, bequeathed to the church of St. Giles, Northampton, his “fayre mas booke written by hand.” In 1512 J. Stawynton of Eydon left “to the church of Heydon vjs. viijd. to bye a masse booke”; and six years later Humphrey Gerard left a like amount to purchase a missal for Lamport church. In 1529 Thomas Pemberton bequeathed 5s. “to by a masse boke to the use of the churche of Rushden”; and in 1533 T. Wallis left “to the church of St. Peter in Isham a masse booke, price iiijs. viijd.” Similar legacies were left to the church of Easton Maudit in 1523, and to St. Margaret’s chapel in Denton in 1536.

(2) The Gradual or Grayle. Bequests for the purchase of grayles occur in many Northamptonshire wills. In 1519 a parishioner left 6s. 8d. to the church of Boughton for this purpose; “a prynted grayle” was left to Sudborough church in 1528; and in 1533 James Staynbank of Tichmarsh bequeathed 10s. to his parish church “to by an antyphoner & a grayll.” In 1534 the parishioners of Spratton were purchasing a new grayle, and J. Peerson left 6s. 8d. towards the cost. Ten shillings was bequeathed in 1542 to buy a grayle for Cold Ashby church; and four years later J. Devias, vicar of Warmington, left “to the church of Warmington to the mayntenance of God’s service xs. for a new printed graile.”

(3) The Breviary or Portiforium. The most interesting book bequest in the wills we are considering is that made by William Adson, parson of Chipping Warden. By his will, dated 1526, he left “to the parysch chyrche of Chepyng Warden vli. sterlyng to by a boke caulyd a brevyary; ffor the qwiche brevyary to be made I have poke for hitt my selfe to oone dwellyng at the Blake Freers in Thetforffe, & paed to hym in yernest vjs. viijd. My promyssse is to have hit for iiiij li; & the other xxs. I wyll shall goo to the profytt of the seyd churche, & to be used as the parochyns shall thynke best.”

Other testators left various sums at different times for the purchase of a new portas or breviary. The following are good examples:

1528. “Also ijs. viijd. to by a portuis to the church of Woodford (to syng) divyne service apon” : Agnes Mayow.
1556. I bequeath to the church of Everdon a “halfe portehouse, the wynter parte” : Ralph Jaxson, priest.

(4) The Antiphonarium. A bequest by Annys Cave, a Yelvertoft lady, shows the purpose for which this book was used. She leaves 20s. “to bye a hole antefener for to synge matyns & evensong upon” (1545). A more expensive book of this class was left to the church of Creaton some years earlier. W. Martin in 1521 bequeathed “to the church of Creton to by an antiphinale iiiij li. vjs. viijd.” and in 1533 T. Wallis left “to the church of Orlingbury an antiphoner, the price thereof iiiij li. at the least.”

Other legacies for the providing of antiphoners were as follows:

1526. “I give towarde the byyng of an antyphonary to the church vjs. viijd” : J. Baxter of Bulwick.
1537. “To the church of Sprotton to bye one antyphonyer xxs” : Roger Parker.
1542. “To the church of Kislingbury xxs. shalbe gyven to by ij antyphoners to be delivered to mayster parson, or his curate” : T. Chaswell.
1545. “I bequethe xxs. to helpe to bye a boke callyd a antyphonar to Bryxworth church” : J. Molton.

In queen Mary’s reign, when the old service-books discarded in the time of Edward VI were being restored, we find the following bequests:
1556. “To the parish church of Charwelton xs. to by an antyfonar”:
Robert Buckelay, clerk.
1558. 3s. 4d. to the church of Flore “towards the bieng of a typhoner”:
W. Sharpe.

(5) The Processionale does not occur very frequently in the Northamptonshire wills, but one or two instances have been noted: In 1531 Hugh Melyng left to the church of Farthingstone “unum processionale imperfectum.” In 1533 Sir Thomas Betterick of Radstone bequeathed “to Throop (Mandeville) church oon processionar”; and in 1539 Robert Clark left a similar legacy to the church of Boughton, and J. Ingley one to Corby church. In queen Mary’s days Edward Giffard of Wicken left “to Saincte John Evangeliste church (in Wyke Dyve) one processionar of parchementte.”

(6) The Manuale. In 1555 the will of Thomas Weston of Cold Ashby contained the following clause: “I gyve to bye a boke called a manuell iijs. iiijd.” The manuale occurs also in a Marholm will.

(7) Other books. In 1389 William de Tonge, citizen of London, bequeathed to the church of Higham Ferrers “unam Legendam ad opus parochiae.”

In 1506 Robert Wyttylbury of Marholm left the following injunctions to his executors: “I wyll that incontynente after the deth of my wif the church of Marham have vj bokes, that is to saye a masse boke, an antyfoner, a manuell, a processionary, an ordinale & a Legenda sanctorum, to remayne in the said chirch of Marham.”

Four books similar to these were bequeathed to the church of Edgcote in 1450 by Joan Bukland. “Item to the said churche a masse boke the first worde of the secund leeff Dei dixit. Item j grayle, the first worde of the secunde leefe Vel hoc. Item a portevose, the first worde of the secund leffe Ipso die. Item j processionary, the first worde of the secund leffe Oremus Deus qui.”

Another interesting bequest of books is that left by John Pyel, founder of the college of Irthlingborough. By his will, dated 1379, the following books were bequeathed to the college, or to the churches of All Saints and St. Peter’s in Irthlingborough: Four “porthors,” a “graiel,” an "ordenal," and two "sautres." "To the said college my best porthors covered with red leather & my bible."

A fourth set of books was left by Sir John Holt, kt. in 1415. He bequeathed to the church of Brampton-by-Dingley "my best missal and a portas with musical notation (unum portiforium notatum). To Richard Holt, clerk, my son, my biblioteca portativa, Legenda aurea and a psalter well and curiously edged with gold, and a liber codiceus written in French."

The ordinale or "pye" mentioned in the will of Robert Wyttylbury was a "directorium sacerdotum" or collection of rubrical directions for the conducting of the services. In was often called the pye or the pica. Thus, in 1539, Thomas Duffeld left "to the church of Stanford one boke called pica."

The psalterium, psalter or psalm-book mentioned in the wills of John Pyel and Sir John Holt, occurs also in one or two other wills. Thus Nicholas Gybbys of Woodford-cum-membris, by will dated 1515, gives to his parish church "a sauter boke"; and John Dawkins of Brackley bequeathes various books "except ij psalters & a primer."

The primer, alluded to in the will of John Dawkins just quoted, was a book of private devotions rather than a service book, and was used largely by the laity. It is often called a "book of hours" or horae.

Another book was the hymnarium, hymnal or hymner, a copy of which was left by Robert Clark to the church of Boughton in 1539; and another, by William Ellys, to Wellingborough church in 1544. It was called also hymnale and hymnarium, and contained a collection of mediaeval hymns. In 1554 Robert Moxon left his "Imnall book to ye church of Towceter"; and two years later Ralph Jaxson bequeathed "to the use of the church of Everdon an hymnar."

The Legenda, Legenda sanctorum and Legenda aurea. The Legenda, mentioned in the will of Wm. Tonge, was a book "containing the long lessons used at matins, as

1 This book is thus referred to in a note "concerning the service of the church" in the Book of Common Prayer. "Moreover the number and hardness of the rules called the Pie, and the manifold changings of the service, was the cause, that to turn the book only was so hard and intricate a matter that many times there was more business to find out what should be read, than to read it when it was found out."

well from the Bible, from the Sermologus and from the Homiliarius, as also from the Passionale, containing the acts of saints read on their festivals.” It was afterwards incorporated in the breviary.\(^1\) The Legenda sanctorum which occurs in the will of Robert Wytylbury was a book of stories, or readings (legenda) from the lives of the saints. The Legenda aurea left by Sir John Holt was the most famous book of sacred legends of the middle ages. Its author was Jacobus à Voragine (Jacopo da Voragggio), archbishop of Genoa in the latter half of the thirteenth century. It was translated and printed by Caxton, whose translation has been twice reprinted in the last twenty-five years. The work (known as the Golden Legend) follows the order of the Christian year, and contains the legends of the saints with appropriate discourses on the seasons and the principal articles of the faith. Both of the last-named books were intended for private reading, and not for use in the church services.

The term “Coucher”\(^2\) referred to in a Chelveston will probably means a Collectarium, or book of short lessons and collects, used at the hour services, except matins. The word coucher is also used for any large book, but the Chelveston testator evidently meant to leave a definite book. The bequest runs: “To the same churche xs. to by a boke named a cowcher.”

VOTIVE MASSES.

Mass of Scala Celi. Legacies frequently occur in the wills of Northamptonshire folk to provide for a mass of Scala Celi, or sometimes of a mass at Scala Celi. In the case of Edmund Mulsho of Newton the intention of the testator is perfectly clear. “I will put an able prest of good conversacon to singe & pray for my soule atte Scala Celi in Rome by the space of an hoole yere & xxx daies.”

\(^1\) Chronicles of All Saints, Derby (appendix).
\(^2\) The word coucher appears to be thus derived. Collectarium, collectier, coultier, couctier, coucbier, coucber: Lee, Glossary of Liturgical Terms, p. 88. In some of the Northamptonshire wills the word coucher is used in the sense of cushion or pillow. In that case it is derived from culcitra, a pillow.
The chapel of our Lady called Scala Celi\(^1\) was built over the cemetery of San Zeno outside the walls of Rome, on the Ostian way. It derived its name from a vision vouchsafed to St. Bernard of a heavenly ladder (Scala Coeli), on which angels were conducting to heaven the souls whom his prayers had delivered from purgatory.

Margaret, countess of Pembroke and Richmond, mother of Henry VII, obtained papal bulls of indulgence granting the same privileges to her son's chapel at Westminster as were attached to the chapel of Scala Celi in Rome. Similar privileges appear to have been granted to the church of St. Botolph in Boston, to the Austin friars churches in Norwich and Northampton, and to one of the churches in Oxford, causing them to be much frequented by pilgrims, who found it easier to pay their devotions in these places than to make a journey to Rome.\(^2\)

In 1514 Robert Marbury of Lowick, in Northamptonshire, left money to provide for a trentall of masses to be sung for his soul "at Scala Cely at Westminster"; and a few years later John Benett of Newbottle left a similar bequest for the singing of 30 masses "at Scala Celi in Oxford." In 1519 John Pratt of Northampton ordered his executors to hire "an honest priest to syng for one hole yere at the altar of Scala Celi before our Lady of Grace in the church of the Freers Augustyns (Northampton)." But in most cases the bequest for a mass of Scala Celi seems to refer to an ordinary votive mass with certain special collects referring to Scala Celi included in it. Among the privileges granted to the members of the famous gild of our Lady in Boston was the following. A mass said on certain days in the gild chapel, or on an altar-stone (portable) belonging to the gild; or even a pater noster and ave, or a mass said in their own parish, if the brother or sister of the gild were unavoidably hindered from going to the privileged place, was allowed the same value for his or her soul in purgatory, as if the same had been said in the chapel of our Lady called Scala Celi in Rome. Probably the mass of Scala Coeli of the Northamptonshire wills was an ordinary votive mass for souls or the like, such as occurs in any missal, but credited with the special indulgence attached to it by various popes. In Foxe's Acts and Monuments\(^1\) is a summary of points agreed to, and not agreed to, by Stephen Gardiner in 1551. He was in favour of the mass, "saying it did profit the quick and dead." He was, however, against "the mass of Scala Celi," "masses satisfactory," and "masses in number," as he could not find them in holy scripture.

\(^1\)This chapel of Scala Celi has been confounded by several well-known writers with the chapel opposite the church of St. John Lateran containing the Scala Santa or Holy Stairs.

Bishop Bale, in his play of King John written to promote and confirm the reformation, makes the king complain of the clergy extracting money "for legacies, trentalls, with Scalacely messys, wherby ye have made the people very assys."\(^2\)

Jesus mass. Another mass frequently alluded to in these Northamptonshire wills was the "missa de nomine Jesu" or Jesus mass. "This mass made its first appearance in the Sarum books as a votive mass. In a manuscript Sarum missal, written about the middle of the fifteenth century, now belonging to Mr. Dewick, there is no mass of the holy Name in the Sanctorale, but it is placed among the votive masses with the following rubric: 'Decimo nono die mensis Julii anno domini millesimo cccc\(^3\) Robertus episcopus Sarum in castro suo Scireborn concessit omnibus vere confessis et contritis dicentibus vel audientibus sexta feria missam de nomine Jhesu Christi quadraginta dies indulgencie tociens quociens eam dixerint vel audierint perpetuis temporibus duraturos.'"\(^3\) It afterwards found its way into the Sanctorale of the Sarum missal (7th August), as well as into the missals of other English uses.

In various Northamptonshire wills bequests were made for the maintenance of the mass of Jesus; and at Wellingborough a "gild of the mass of Jesu" existed for this special purpose. It probably held its meetings in the beautiful little chapel on the south side of the church, on the roof of which are still to be seen carved the signs and implements of the passion.

Altars in honour of the holy name were to be found at Bugbrooke, Deene, Moulton, Potterspury, and Weedon Beck; and there was a Jesus chapel at St. John's, Peterborough. "The mass of Jesu" was maintained at Daventry, Harleston, Stoke Bruern, Watford, and various other places. At Wellingborough this mass appears to have been said daily, but in most cases it was confined to Friday; as at Daventry, where a parishioner in 1528 left "a farthinge every Fryday to fynd a lyght at Jhs mass, to be quarterly payd out of my house in Daventry." ¹

St. Gregory's trental. Frequent mention occurs in these Northamptonshire wills of a trental of St. Gregory. The Sarum missal contains the following definition of the term: "Whoever may desire to keep the trental of St. Gregory must celebrate three masses of the Lord's nativity, three of the Lord's epiphany, three of the purification of St. Mary, three of the annunciation of the same, three of the Lord's resurrection, three of the Lord's ascension, three of Whitsunday, three of the Trinity, three of the assumption of St. Mary the Virgin, three of her nativity; and let these masses be celebrated within the octaves of the above feasts. . . . Let him also say Placebo and Dirige with nine psalms, lessons and anthems, except in Eastertide, when the service must be said with three, and let the commendation of souls be said so many times."

Mass of the five wounds. The legend which precedes this mass in the Sarum missal is briefly this. St. Boniface lay on his deathbed: to him appeared the archangel Raphael with the said mass. "Rise and write out this office," saith he, "and say it five times, and thou shalt be healed: and whosoever shall say it for himself or for any sick person five times shall be healed, and if for a soul in purgatory, it shall be delivered." St. Boniface then inquired who he was, and on learning, conceded to all rite confessis et bene contritis, who should say this mass five times, the seventh part of the forgiveness of all their sins; and to all who got it said, forty days' indulgence of mortal, and a year's of venial sins.

Thirteen masses revealed to pope Innocent by an angel. The will of Agnes Hilton of Northampton, dated 1535, contains the following interesting clause: “Item I will that thare be xiiij masses said for me thatt weare shewd to busshoppe Innocente be revelation by an aungell from allmytie Godd. The first masse of the Advent Ad te levavi; the second on Christenmasse day Puer natus; the thirde of the Epiphanye Ecce advent; the iiiijth masse of Septuagesima Circundederunt; the vth on Palme Sunday Domine. Ad evangelium Cum appropinquasset, & rede the passion after masse; the vjth of the resurrecton; the viijth of the assencon; the viijth of Penthecoste; the ixth of the Crosse; the xth of our Lady Vultum tuum. Oratio Concede. Epistola Ego quasi. Gradale Propter veritatem. Alleluia Virga Jesse. Sequentia Ducis (? dulcis) ave; the xjth of the trynytie; the xijth of the apostells; the xijth of the angels.”

It is interesting to note that in deference to the royal injunctions pope Innocent has become bishop Innocent in this will.

The first four masses offer no difficulty as they are found both in the Sarum and Roman missals. The mass for Palm Sunday appears to borrow its gospel (Matt. xxi, 1–9) from that said before the blessing of palms in the Roman missal. In the tenth mass Vultum tuum is the votive mass of our Lady to be said between Christmas and the Purification, but the collect, epistle, etc. differ from the corresponding forms of that mass in the Sarum and Roman missals, though they are found in different services in honour of our Lady. The collect *Concede*¹ is taken from the mass *Salve, sancta parens.*²

*Ego quasi*³ is the lesson to be read “for the epistle”

in the nativity of our Lady in the Sarum missal, p. 895. The gradual Propter veritatem is that of the Assumption of our Lady in the Sarum missal, p. 867. The Alleluia or hymn, Virga Jesse, is part of the tract in the Roman missal for the Annunciation of our Lady when falling after Easter. The sequence, Ducis ave, is probably a scribe's error for Dulcis ave, the first words of a well-known hymn. It is one of the Saturday sequences of our Lady in the Missale ad usum Fratrum Predicatorum (Venice, 1550).

The Council of Valence, in 1565, condemned among other superstitions, “superstitiosum cultum missarum quae dicuntur revelatae.” Doubtless “the thirteen masses revealed to pope Innocent” were among the number.

THE GILDS.

Closely connected with the history of the church were the gilds, which played so important a part in parish life in mediaeval days. Every town church with any claim to importance had several of these useful institutions; and even small village churches could often boast one or two. Over a hundred gilds are mentioned in the Northamptonshire wills, and doubtless many others existed, of which no record has been preserved. In the case of the poorer village gilds the members, as a rule, restricted themselves to the maintenance of a light or lights in their parish church; but the more important town gilds were much more ambitious. They frequently maintained at their own expense one or more chaplains; kept in repair, and sometimes built, the chapel in which they worshipped, and furnished it with the necessary plate, vestments, and other necessaries. To take a single church as an example, at All Saints, Northampton, the gild of our Lady provided three chaplains to say mass in the parish church. The first chaplain celebrated what was known as the “Morrow mass.” It was said at an early hour, usually between four and five in the morning, for the benefit of travellers and others who desired to hear mass before setting out on their journey.

The second chaplain celebrated a mass at the hour of prime (6 a.m.) which was known as “le prime messe”; while the third sang his mass between nine and eleven with music and great pomp of chaplains and clerks (“cum nota et magna solemnitate capellanorum et clericorum”), so that those coming into the town from the country might be able to hear mass when the usual services were over. At sunset these chaplains were also expected to conduct a musical service, consisting of antiphons, prayers, etc. to the accompaniment of an organ, at which a large congregation was usually present (“copiosa gentium concurrit multitudo”).

The gild of the holy Trinity provided four chaplains, and made itself responsible for the payment of the “organ player,” who received 40s. a house worth 10s. and 26s. 8d. more “for teachin childerne to sing.” “Three singing men” were also maintained at the expense of the gild, “eche of them having for his stipend for term of lyfe 40s”; while the parish sexton received from them “for his stipend 16s. and one house of 16s. a yere.”

The gild of Corpus Christi, here as elsewhere, was responsible for the organisation of the great annual procession through the streets of the town on Corpus Christi day. Besides this the members maintained two chaplains to say mass daily in the church of All Saints, “for the good estate of the members and benefactors of the gild, and for the faithful departed.”

In addition to the three already mentioned there were no less than five other gilds attached to the church of

1 Morrow masses were endowed in most of the large town churches along the north road, Grantham, Newark, Doncaster, to be said for the benefit of travellers “post vocacionem campane que vocatur ly daybelle.” At St. Mary’s, Shrewsbury, it was the custom till within quite recent times to read morning prayer at 5 a.m. or about that time, on the days when market was held at Oswestry. This was no doubt a survival of the morrow mass. A morrow mass was endowed at Kettering.
All Saints; and they provided at least twelve, if not more, additional clergy for the benefit of the great central parish of Northampton. From this it will be seen what an extremely important part the gilds took in church life in the days of our mediaeval forefathers. The chief gilds in Northamptonshire were those of All Saints, Northampton, which have just been mentioned; the gilds of St. John’s, Peterborough; and the gild of our Lady at Oundle, whose members were to be found in all the villages round the town. Wellingborough and Kettering also could each boast an important set of gilds, four at Kettering and six at Wellingborough. At Mears Ashby there were three; at Brixworth, Finedon, Irchester, Pytchley, Warkton and Weekley three; and at Burton Latimer, Chelveston, Cranford, Cransley, Grendon, Kilsby, Moulton, Northampton (St. Giles), Orlingbury, and Wilbarston two each. At Irthingborough and at Raunds it seems probable that the Resurrection and Sepulchre gilds were in reality identical, though called indifferently by either name. The following is a list of the gilds mentioned in the Northamptonshire wills:

GILD OF OUR LADY OF BOSTON.

In addition to these Northamptonshire gilds several other fraternities of national importance are alluded to in the wills we are considering. In 1533 Sir Raulff Wood of Radstone left a bequest to the gild of St. George and St. Christopher in York; but the most popular gild with Northamptonshire folk, outside their own county, appears to have been the well-known gild of our Lady of Boston.

This famous brotherhood was founded on the first Sunday in Lent, 1260, not only for the people of Boston, but for the whole of England (tocius Anglie). Numerous privileges and indulgences were granted to this gild by various popes, and its members seem to have been very widely spread. They were to be found in various parts of Northamptonshire: at Whitfield in the extreme southwest, and at Peterborough, Brigstock and Deene in the north. To take a couple of examples, Mary Cotton of Brigstock leaves “to our Lady of Boston the dewty unpayed. Item I wyll the dewty of Boston gyld be born unto the place, & ther an obyte be don for me.” William Fenton of Peterborough in 1530 bequeathes the sum of 6s. 8d. “to our Lady of Boston for my brotherhed.”

ORPHANAGE OF ST. CATHERINE AT LINCOLN.

An institution of a different nature which occurs in one or two wills was the orphanage of St. Catherine of Lincoln. From the Valor Ecclesiasticus we learn that the canons of the Gilbertine house of St. Catherine outside Lincoln paid £21 13s. 4d. a year for the maintenance and education of orphans in the hospital of the Holy Sepulchre at Lincoln, and for five lay sisters to look after the orphans.

The parishioners of Paston, near Peterborough, appear to have taken a special interest in this orphanage, for several of them left legacies for its maintenance.

1531. “To the orphans of Seynt Katherine’s without the barrs at Lincoln iiijd”: J. Bell of Paston.

CHURCH ALES.

An important source of income to the officials of our old parish churches was the “church ale.” “The church

1 There is a valuable article on The Priory of St. Katharine without Lincoln by the Rev. R. E. G. Cole in Assoc. Arch. Societies’ Reports, xxvii, 264–336.
ale," says bishop Hobhouse, "was the most universal resort for eliciting the bounty of the parish." It was a parish feast, and corresponded to a certain extent with the modern parochial tea. The church ale, however, was on a much larger scale, and often lasted for several days. The "ale," so called, which was brewed for a church ale, was a sweet beverage made with hops or bitter herbs. It was not like our modern beer, but was much less heavy, and was probably hardly intoxicating.

When all was ready, invitations were sent to the inhabitants of the neighbouring villages, who felt it a point of honour to come and assist their neighbours, and, of course, to make their offerings towards the expenses. Sometimes the materials for the feast were all given, and those participating in the good things made their offerings. Sometimes the food was purchased; but in either case the proceeds went to the church funds.

The following is a summary of the balance-sheet of a church ale held in a little Somersetshire village 380 years ago. Funds were required for the repair of the church, and the ordinary means of raising them, a church ale, was resorted to.

"Expenditure. For nine bushels of wheat, 9s. 4d; for eight barrels of beer, 13s. 8d; for three calves, 9s. 4d; for two sheep, 5s. 5d; for a ewe and three lambs, 7s; for geese and pig with hare, 1s. 5d; for chickens, 6d; for butter and eggs, 6d; for wood, 1s. 9d; for the minstrel, 1s. 8d; for rushes and making clean the barn, 3d; for spices, 4d; for Simon Redding and his wife, 1s." The total expenditure on this occasion amounted to £2 12s. 2d. and the total receipts were £4 9s. 5d. leaving a net profit of £1 17s. 3d. which is equivalent to from £20 to £25 at the present value of money.

In early days the church ales appear to have been frequently held in the sacred building itself, and even in later days this was sometimes the case. Dr. Cox gives an instance of this in 1506 at St. Lawrence's, Reading.

1 Churchwardens' Accounts (Somerset Record Society, vol. iv).
2 At Thorpe-le-Soken, Essex, the screen of the south chapel of the chancel (early sixteenth century) was provided by offerings made at the ales. There is an English inscription to this effect.
3 Churchwardens' Accounts (Antiquaries' Books), p. 287.
The churchwardens’ accounts of that year show the following payments:

To Macrell for makyng clene of the church agaynst the day of drynking in the seid church . . . . . iiiijd.
For flesh spyce & bakyng of pasteys agaynst the said drynkyng . ijs. ixd. ob.
For ale at the same drynkyng . . . . . xvijd.
For mete & drynke to the Taberer . . . . . ixd.

Usually, however, at least in later times, the church ale was held in the church-house built for the purpose; or, as in the Somersetshire example just quoted, in a barn.

A “church house” is alluded to in five of the Northamptonshire wills now under consideration. In 1512 William Randell of Holdenby left “to the church house vd.” and in 1516 Robert Petytt of Finedon bequeathed “to the makyng off the church howse vjs. viijd.” Eight years later a Wellingborough parishioner bequeathed “to ye byldynge of the church howse xijd ”; and in 1537 another inhabitant of Wellingborough left “to our Lady’s gylde & to other gyldes for the ayde of the same, to be usyde & occupyyde in the church howse a table clothe.” In 1541 Richard Westmore of London, left 5s. “amonge the paryshioners of Quelyngbrowe (Wellingborough) to make them merye in the church house.”

Legacies in aid of church ales occur in a number of Northamptonshire wills: the earliest we have noted occurs in 1528, when Thomas Browks of Helmdon left “to the church ayll j stryke of whete.” This doubtless was for providing bread. As a rule, however, benefactions took the shape of malt or barley, for brewing the ale. Thus, in 1533, W. Symkyn of Towcester left “to the church ale at Whitsontyde haullf a quarter of mailt ”; in 1535 J. Fawcer bequeathed a strike of malt for the church ale at Norton by Daventry; and in 1539 Richard Master left a similar legacy to the church of Dodford.

At Helmdon a parishioner in 1523 bequeathed a strike of barley to the “torche ale”; at Crick H. Myles (1546) left a heiffer to the cross ale; and at Middleton Cheney “ii busshell of malt ” was left to the young men’s ale.

1 Existing church-houses built over churchyard gateways are fairly common in Devon, e.g. at Bickington and Ilsington, near Newton Abbot; and in a large number of villages the inn close to the church is called the Church House, e.g. Widecombe, Broadhempston, Tor Bryan, etc. There is another good example of a church-house at Wendron in Cornwall, near Helston.
At Lilford we find a “mould ale” which was apparently a local name for a funeral feast. In 1557 Robert Meu of Lilford left the following instructions to his executors: “I will that there shall be prepared against my burial in the church of Lillford for my mould ale in bred & drink three shillings & four pence.”

 Rogationtide Processions. **

Parochial processions or perambulations were customary from a very early date on the three days immediately preceding Ascension day. On these occasions litanies were sung invoking a blessing on the growing crops, and praying for the prevention, or for the removal, of plague and pestilence. These days were usually known as Rogation days, though in several of the Northamptonshire wills the week is called cross week, or procession week.¹

The Sarum missal provided a special collect, epistle and gospel for this season, but they were not retained in the revised Book of Common Prayer.

One of the most interesting bequests in connexion with the Rogation days to be found in the Northamptonshire wills is that made by T. Nicholls of Blatherwycke, who, in 1533, left a sum of money “to by one cow which shall be lent to ferm yerely for ijs. viijd. so that she remayn for ever; & that ijs. viijd. to be [bestowyed] & givven in bred & ale to the people of the parish of Blatherwick on Munday or Tewasday in the Rogacon dayes, when they shall go in procession.”

Another good example occurs in the will of William Vyend of Harrington in 1542. “I bequeath a cow to the mayntenance of a drynking at Axys crosse or at the Frythe Lane one the Monday in the Rogacion wek under thys condyon that Mr. Vicar shall say De profundis for the souls of William Vyend, & for the souls of his father & mother & for all christen sowls, the vicar to have for his labor a cake & a pott with ale, & he to desyre those present that can [to] say a Paternoster & an Ave Maria & a Credo for the souls rehearsed, the forsaid cowe to be maintayned for the foresaid use.”

¹ In other parts of the country they were called “gang-days,” and Rogation week is often called “gang-week.”
Five years later T. Tobye left the following legacy to the parishes of Norton and Whilton: "To Norton church vj hyves of bees & the increys of them to make the parish a drynkyn in the crose weke after ye procession. To Welton [Wilton] church vj hyves of bees for to doo in lyke maner."

Other bequests of a like nature are to be found at Bulwick in 1532 and 1544. In one instance a cow, and in the other "a hecfor (heifer) of four yeres olde," was left "to make the parish drink on crosse Tewesdaye." A third bequest provided for a drinking in the same parish on Cross Monday; and at Deene a parishioner left "a redd hecfor" "to the processyon ale on Weymsdaye in Rogation week" (1532). At Harleston in 1558, and at Rothwell in 1559, money was left to be bestowed in bread and ale among the poor people that will follow the procession on Cross Monday.

MORTUARIES.

The mortuary was a charge quite distinct from the burial fee paid to the rector or to the church officials for breaking the ground in the church or churchyard. In theory the mortuary was "a gift left by a man at his death to his parish church as a set-off against any personal tithes or offerings that had not been duly paid during his lifetime. By custom the voluntary and occasional offering became a regular due in most districts, and eventually grew into an impost that was enjoined, both by civil and ecclesiastical law, in all parishes where the custom had obtained. The mortuary of the rector was the analogous liability to the heriot of the lord."¹ As the lord always claimed the tenant’s best beast, the second best beast went as a mortuary to the rector, and in case the deceased possessed no beast, his best wearing apparel was claimed as a mortuary.

In course of time abuses grew up in connexion with this system, and excessive mortuaries were claimed. To remedy this an act was passed in 1530 (21 Henry VIII, ch. 6, § 2), by which it was enacted that for the future mortuaries should not be demanded from any person whose movable goods were worth less than ten marks. On property worth from ten marks to £30 the mortuary was fixed at 3s. 4d; from £30 to £40 at 6s. 8d; and exceeding £40 at 10s. This last was the highest sum fixed. The custom lingered on well into the nineteenth century, and is paid even now in certain places in the case of wealthy parishioners. In Northamptonshire the mortuary seems to have been usually known as the "principal," though the term mortuary often occurs; and occasionally the payment is called the "corse-present." Provision for the payment of the "principal" or mortuary occurs in almost all Northamptonshire wills, except in the case of the very poor who did not come within the act.

A few typical examples are given in the following extracts under various parishes in different parts of the county: one or two of these may be quoted here. John Lawrence of Edgcote, by will dated 1531, bequeathes "to the hie aulter of Ochecote (Edgcote) to Allmitie god my maker for that I have nott don my dewtie att all tymes in gyffeng thanks to Him ffor that He hath send & gyffen unto me in this present & wretched world, & to be prayd ffor, a redd heeford (heifer) with a white rompe now beyng with caulf, the qwich heefor after my decesse I will that Mr. John Higdon, parson now beyng, have."

A somewhat similar bequest is that of William Gylis who, in 1531, bequeathed "to the prioresse of Catesbye & to her sisters a cowe in dischargeing of my conscyence."

In 1519 Robert Parke, vicar of Duston, leaves "to my lord abbot [of St. James', Northampton] for my seconde mortuarye a cow or else a gowne."

Usually, however, in Northamptonshire the mortuary given was the best horse, as in the following instances:

1512. "For my mortuary my best good wych is a black awmlyng horse after the manner & custom of the towne of Hiegham": Wm. Drage of Higham Ferrers.
1526. "For my mortuary my best horse with brydyll & saddell": Robert Tyghe of Maxey.
1529. "My best horse to be my corse present": T. Cosbie of Naseby.

Those who had no horses or cattle left their best robe, or cloak or jewel or other article, as in the following cases:

1485. "To the vycar of Seynt Gyles, Northampton, where I am dwelling, for my mortuary my best jewell, after the custome of the same town": Margaret Harrowden.

1501. "I bequeth for my mortuary my best gowne with the hoode longing therto": Dr. Richard Berde of Northampton.

1504. "Pro meo principali meum optimum bonum quod est mobile": Agnes Turner of Great Oakley.

The act of 21 Henry VIII, with regard to mortuaries, is referred to in several wills:

1530. "My mortuary shall be gyven to my paryshe church after the fforme of the perlyment now beyng holden at London": T. Awdwyncke of Cottingham.

1539. "I bequethe in the stede off my mortuary accornder unto the kyngs act made by his nobull perlyment": Robert Atkyng.

546. "I bequeth for my mortuary as the lawys of this realme off ingland hath ordeyneyd": Euseby Isham.

HERMITS AND ANCHORITES.

All through the middle ages Northamptonshire appears to have had its full share of anchorites and hermits; and several of them are alluded to in the Northamptonshire wills. "The essential difference between an anker or anchorite and a hermit appears to have been that, whereas the former passed his whole life shut up in a cell, the latter, although leading a solitary life, wandered about at liberty."\(^1\)

Weldon had its hermit in the person of Sir Gregory, to whom various charitable people in different parts of the county left bequests. At Harrowden dwelt Sir Thomas, another hermit, who appears to have been of equal repute. Both of these men must have been in priest's orders, for trentalls of masses were ordered to be said by them.

The same remark probably applies to the "armett" of St. James' chapel in Rushden; and to "Stonton, the hermit of St. Thomas' chapel" in Far Cotton on the outskirts of Northampton. There was also a hermitage on or near the west bridge of Northampton, as is shown by a seventeenth-century drawing of Northampton castle in the British Museum.

One of its occupants was probably John Mason, to whom Richard Berde in 1501 left the following bequest: "I woll that John Mason, heremytt, have my pryntid masse booke to his chapell."

At Towcester too there was a hermitage. In 1534 "John Lettley, hermyyte" witnessed the will of James Glastebery of Towcester; and in February, 1557–8, John Knott of Caldecote in the parish of Towcester leaves twenty loads of stone to repair the highway "to be leyd ageynst the house wher the ermitage stode."

With regard to anchorites there was one or more in the house of the Austin friars, Northampton. Various legacies were left "to good father anker," to "the ancre of our Lady of Grace," "to the ancer or recluse in Northampton," and "to the armet of Saynt Austens," between the years 1510 and 1532. At the suppression of the friary in 1538 "Robert Barrett, annochorita," was one of those who signed the deed of surrender.

PILGRIMAGES.

Bequests for pilgrimages are not common in the wills we are considering, but there are one or two interesting examples. The earliest instance occurs in the will of William de Brikelsworth, 1367, which was proved in the Hustings court of London, 41 Edward III.

"Item lego ad inveniendum iiiij homines in terram sanctam quando commune passagium sit regum, ducum, comitum, baronum et aliorum magnatum, pro patre meo & matre mea, et me, xx libras. Et volo quod Willelmus de Lobenham habeat illud argentum in manu sua et ponat ad negociandum ad opus suum quousque tempus advenerit passagii predicti": William de Brikelsworth, 1367 (London Hustings court roll, 95, no. 158, 41, Edward III).

Another interesting example is taken from the will of John Benett of Raunds, who left money in 1531 to send men on pilgrimage for him to the shrine of our Lady of Walsingham, and to a number of other places.

"I will & stritly commaunde yt my executors shall fynde a honest man to go on pilgrimage to our Ladye of Wallsyngham, & thei to have to fynde the seid man xiijs. iiiijd. & they to gyf him suffycient wagis a daye as thei

1 MSS. Add. 11564, art. 24.
& he can agree of the said xiijs. iiiijd. And I will that the said pilgrime shall offer at every chapell, or at any other place within ij ferlongs of his way, & to offer at Walisgyngham to our Ladye ij [blank], to our Ladye mylke, to our Ladye of Pite jd, at the chapell of Saint Laurens jd. & to guyff in almes to certen poore men jd. & this to be payed for owte of the said xiijs. iiiijd. Item to fynde a man to go on pilgrimage to our Lady off Eldernale 1 xijd. & to offer ther jd. of the said xijd. Item to Sent Savyor of Wanysford xiiijd. & to offer jd. of the said xiiijd. Item to Mady’ house (?) iiiijd. & to offer jd. Item to the rode of Higham vijd. & to offer jd. of the said vijd. Item to Seint Laurens in Stanwick iiiijd. & to offer jd. of the said iiiijd. Item to Seint John of Bowghton xijd. & to offer jd. To Seint [Anne] of Bulwic xijd. & to offer jd. To Seint Thomas of Islippe iiiijd. & to offer jd. Item to Seint Sithe of Oundell & to Seint Rumbold of Stok xijd. & to offer iijd. Item to the gyld of our Ladye in Oundyll iijs. iiijd. To the gyld of Seint [Anne] in Bulwik iijs. iiijd. Item to the gyld of Seint John of Bowghton iijs. iijd” : John Benett, 1531 (p. 390).

A less definite example is that contained in the will of Richard Lynsey of Southwick: “I wyll that my rayment be sold by Sir Robert to performe my pylgrymage” (1520). Eight years later (1528) Thomas Walter of Cransley left the following bequest: “To a persone to go to Walsyngham vs; lykewise to our Lady of Lincoln iijs. Also to seke that blessed blode in Halys ijs. viijd.” In the same year W. Colfex of Geddington gave the following instructions to his executors: “Also that Henry my son have my colte to performe my pilgrymage, yt is to saye to our Lady of Walsynghen & [our Lady] of Northampton.”

Of the places mentioned in these wills the shrine of our Lady of Walsingham is too well known to need any description, and the holy blood of Hayles was almost equally famous. Erasmus tells us that there was scarcely a person of note in England who had not at some time or other visited the shrine of Walsingham, or sent an offering to it; and if the same could not be said of Hayles, it is certain that this famous Cotswold shrine attracted an immense number of pilgrims during the middle ages.

Our Lady of Lincoln refers doubtless to the cathedral, and our Lady of Northampton was probably the famous image of the Virgin in the church of the White friars.

We have noted no bequest among the Northamptonshire wills to Hayles abbey; but to our Lady of Walsing-

1 Eldername is mentioned in one of the court rolls of Higham Ferrers. It was evidently a hamlet within the manors of Higham or Raunds, or one of the local manors from which suit was owed to Higham.
ham various testators left legacies. The following are typical examples:

1497. "To our Lady of Walsingham a cheyne of gold": Wm. Nevell of Carlton.
1521. "To our Lady of Walsyngam a payr of beads of moder of pearle gawded with sylver & gylt, & on every syde of the gawdys a bead of corall": Elizabeth Halley of Wittering.
1526. "Item I will a sylver [torn off] to be offeryd to our Lady of Walsyngham. To our Lady off [the] White freers of Northampton a pere of coral [beads]": Agnes Barwicke of Irthlingborough.

To the last named image, that of our Lady in the White friars, various other legacies were left. In 1512 William Thompson bequeathed "to the blessyd ymage of our Lady in the house of the Freers Carmelite xijd"; and Agnes Haywarde left to the same image her second best ring.

Other shrines or monasteries to which bequests were made by Northamptonshire folk were Sempringham (J. Dedyke of Oundle, 1529); "the monastery of Saynt William1 of Bedillsden" [Biddlesden] to which a parishioner of Whitfield in 1527 left "a stall of beys"; and our Lady of Coventry to which Sir Raulff Wood of Radstone left a small bequest in 1533. Richard Easingwold of Islip left his body in 1508 to be buried "before the holy ymage of maister John Shorn" in the priory church of Binham in Norfolk.
Master John Schorne here referred to was rector of North Marston in Buckinghamshire (1289–1314). He was noted far and wide for his preaching and for his piety;
but he is best known from the legend which always attaches to his name that on one occasion he conjured the devil into a boot! He is depicted on various Norfolk rood-screens holding in his hand a large boot from which the devil is seen emerging. He was buried at North Marston, which at once became a popular place of pilgrimage. In fact Erasmus tells us that it could almost rival the famous shrine of Walsingham in the number of its devotees. The offerings at Marston church are said to have amounted in a single year to £500, equivalent to at least £6,000 at the present rate of money. At the close of the fifteenth century Richard Beauchamp, bishop of Salisbury, obtained permission from the pope to remove the shrine to Windsor. It was placed in St. George’s chapel in the Lincoln chantry, which thus acquired the name of master John Schorne’s chapel, and is so styled in 1506.

AGRICULTURAL BEQUESTS.

From the foregoing notes it will be seen that the forms of bequest adopted by testators in these Northamptonshire wills was exceedingly varied. One of the commonest was a strike of barley or malt, or more rarely of wheat, rye or maslin.¹

In one or two instances an “acur of peysse” was given; as at Naseby in 1529 when this bequest was left towards the purchase of a new cope. More often, however, bequests of this nature took the form of a “land” of wheat or barley or pease. Thus in 1521 a Newnham man left to the church “one lond of wette that ys in water forlong”; in the following year John Clifton of Byfield bequeathed a “londe of barley of a long furlong”; and in 1529 another Byfield parishioner left “to the torches a land of barley on the hedlond besides the parsonage wall.” The term “land” here used doubtless means one of the long strips into which a cornfield was divided by water-furrows.

Beasts and sheep were also very often bequeathed to the church. In some cases they were intended to be sold for the benefit of some particular altar or light; in other instances they were to be added to the church stock and let out to hire. With regard to beasts, a very frequent bequest was a heifer or a calf. At Towcester a parishioner left to the church “a calf of the age of twelve weeks.” At Brington a “blossom cow” was bequeathed to the church; and at Thorpe Mandeville “a hawkie cowe.”² In four or five instances mention is made of a “cow-bullock,” as for instance, at Horton and Welton. In the latter case the animal was one year old; in the Horton instance it was a beast of two years. John Page of Knoston in the parish of Irchester³ leaves, inter alia, “ten milch beasts & tenne bullocks,” and “one cowe bullock.” Sir John Ireland, chantry priest of Finedon, in 1546 bequeathes “a redd daffed cowe, a blacke pyed hecfore & a blacke dawffed cow bullock of ij yers old.”

² A “hawkie” is said by Halliwell to be a cow with a white face; and a “blossom cow” appears to mean a roan.

Bequests of horses to the church are not very common, but they occur now and then in Northamptonshire wills. Sheep, however, were constantly bequeathed by pious parishioners, under a great variety of names: chilvers, hoggerells, shere-hogs, ewe-hoggerells, wethers, wether-hoggerells, ewes and lambs.

Another frequent form of bequest was a hive of bees. Thus in 1523 a Polebrooke man left to one of the altars in his parish church “a ewe & a lamb & a bee hyve with the been.” Legacies of this kind were particularly valuable, as they helped to provide pure wax for the various lights. Myles Ross of Naseby in 1529 bequeathed all his “hyves of bees to maynten the rode lyjth & the sepulture lyjth,” and numerous similar bequests are to be found.

A somewhat curious legacy was that of T. Jeffere of Naseby, who by will dated 1529 left to his “goostley father a hene & xviij chekyns & vj chesys.”

Before concluding these notes we desire to express our deep indebtedness to the Rev. Dr. Cox, F.S.A. and Mr. A. Hamilton Thompson, F.S.A. for reading through the proof-sheets, and for many valuable suggestions; to Mr. W. H. St. John Hope, Litt.D. D.C.L. the Rev. Prebendary Wordsworth, the Rev. E. S. Dewick, F.S.A. Dr. Montagu Rhodes James, F.S.A. Mr. J. S. Young, and many others for much kindly help; and last but not least to the ever-courteous officials of the Northampton probate registry, Messrs. Young, Groves and Woodford.

1 The term “cow-bullock” probably means what is now known as a “martin heifer,” i.e. a heifer that will not breed. It may, however, denote a heifer that has been unsexed in order to be fattened for the salt tub. A veterinary surgeon informs us that the performing of this operation was no uncommon thing in his early days.

2 A chilver appears to denote a ewe. The meaning of the word hoggerell seems to have varied considerably at different dates. Surrey’s Aeneid, iv, 72, published in 1547, speaks of “hogrels of two yeares.” A writer in 1607 says, “The first year we call it in English a lamb: so the second year a hog, lamb-hog, or teg, if it be a female; the third year hoggrils or theave” (New English Diet.) Nowadays, at least in Northamptonshire, a hoggerell means a sheep under one year; a shear-hog denotes a sheep that has been once shorn; and a theave means a sheepling ewe.

¹ Ecton, Liber Valorvm, gives the dedication as St. Peter. Bridges' Northants, and the diocesan calendar give St. Mary Magdalene. One of the columns on the north side of the nave has a very curious capital, with figures of two men in armour, a mitred bishop or abbot, and St. Mary Magdalene. The mitred figure may be St. Peter, but he holds no keys; and it seems more probable that it represents the abbot of Peterborough, lord of the manor and patron of the living; while the two armed men may represent the tenants of his two knight's fees in Cottingham and Middleton. If this is the case there is some ground for supposing that St. Mary Magdalene, the fourth figure, is the true patroness of the church.

4 The parish accounts of Culworth, which date from 1531, show that there were several sets of church officers in addition to the churchmen or churchwardens. They were: (1) The wardens of St. Christopher. (2) The torchmen, sometimes called the rood-light-men or the light wardens. (3) The town-stock wardens. As the accounts of these officers throw considerable light on the subject with which we are dealing we give two of them. The accounts of the wardens of St. Christopher for the year 1531 were as follows:

IRTHLINGBOROUGH: THE COLLEGE.

[In 1375 John Pyel, mercer and citizen of London, obtained a royal licence to found a college in the church of St. Peter, Irthlingborough, for six secular canons (one of whom should be dean) and four clerks. He died before the work was completed, but his intentions were carried out by his widow, Joan, in 1388.]

There seems little doubt that the black marble tomb now against the east wall of the south chapel at Irthlingborough is that of Sir Thomas Cheyne. It is, at any rate, of exactly the date of his death.

V.C.H. Northants. ii, 179.
Extracts from the will of the founder (dated the morrow of St. John the Baptist, 1379: proved in London, 22nd August, 1382):

Body to be buried “en la porche de lesglise de seint Pier en Irtlyngburgh.”
To the poor on the day of his burial, cs. viz. to every poor person who comes, iiijd. and to each one “qui voet dire soun sautre sept psalmes, quinsze salmes, et letanie, placebo et dirige adoncques par troys foitz,” vjd.
To every poor person who watches a night or a day round his body to pray for his soul, iiijd. for all time after his death. . .
His body to be covered “de blanket et de russet”; one taper at his head and another at his feet. . . Thirteen poor folk clothed in blanket and russet to hold thirteen torches during the mass when his body shall be buried. The said torches to be given to the churches (sic—as esglises) to serve God in the Sacrament at the disposition of his executors . . .
To complete (parfaire) the college, bell-tower (clocher), works (oueraigues, i.e. ouvrages) and ordinances begun and ordained by him in the church and churchyard of St. Peter in Irtlyngburgh, and for vestments, books and other things necessary to the said college, c. marc.
To amend the church of All Saints in Irtlyngburgh, the bridge of Irtlyngburgh as they necessarily need, and to perform (parjournir) the thirteen (tresze) crosses of stone (pere) at Irtlingburghe, as he devised them to be put in divers places in Irtlingburgh and in the fields, to amend the high roads in Irtlingburgh and do other works in Irtlingburgh and elsewhere, etc. cc marc.
To the parishioners of All Saints, the quire-cope (quercope) and other vestments of camaka, which are used to serve in the said church, with half his surplices, his “grayel” and other books which have been in the said church, to serve therein, and a strong chest to guard the said things.
To the parishioners and college of St. Peter to serve in the said church, all his other vestments and surplices, missals, four “porthors,” a “graiel,” an “ordenal,” two “sautres,” two silver cruets, a censer and “paxebrede” of silver and a chest bound with iron to keep them in.
To the said college, if it be completed, all his other books.
If the college be not completed, he wills c. li. to find six persons a year soon after his death to sing in the said church of St. Peter and to say each day seven psalms, 15 psalms, and litany, placebo and dirige, and commendations in the said church or the bounds of the said town of Irtlingburgh, for three years or more, as his executors shall be able to pay the salary out of the said c. li. Said priests to swear residence. One to sing daily mass of the Trinity or the holy Spirit, another mass of our Lady, a third mass of Requiem, the other three mass of the office of the day, of the Passion, or what seems best to them. They are also to sing or say at each vespers, Salve Regina, before an image of our Lady in the said church, and that done, to say De profundis. If the college is finished before the c. li. is expended, it is to be applied to the purposes of the college.

To the said college his best “porthors” covered with red leather (covertz

Henry Pyel, archdeacon of Northampton, by will dated 15th April, 1379 (proved 27th April, 1379), also left his body to be buried at Irthlingborough, either in the church of St. Peter, or in the church of All Saints, according to the disposal of his brother, John Pyel. He bequeathed to the fabric of the church of St. Peter xl. and to the clerk of the church of All Saints, cs. (Bishop Buckingham’s memoranda, Lincoln, f. 177).

3 Laer, layer = lair, i.e., a bed, place where one lies. The word is still in common use for a tomb in Scotland: e.g. archbishop Kennedy’s lair on the north side of the chancel of the university church at St. Andrew’s, or the burial-sites in large cemeteries like the necropolis at Glasgow. For the same expression see under St. John’s gild. The word is there spelt layer.

It is thus described by Lee in his manuscript history of Northampton: "In ye 27th yeare of the reigne of king Henry 8th anno dni. 1535, Laurence Manly mayor, was the cross in the markett place made. There was 8 large stones sett in the ground abt. 2 foot high cutt & carved, & upon them 8 large pillers of timber with carved work upon them. They did bear up ye roof & ye timber from one piller to the next piller was arched & carved. In ye middle was 3 steps or rounds of stone to sit upon, & to go up from ye middle of ye cross by a small paire of staires into the lanthorne, or little chamber where were lodged ye markett strike & other utenells belonging to ye markett, & a doore at ye foot of ye stairs lockt up from markett to markett. The whole cross was covered all over with lead, & ye lanthorne well glased & little posts from every square all covered with lead & apes at ye top of them with little iron rods in their hands with fanses on ye tops of them. The compass of ye cross was so large yt betwene the lanthorne & ye outsides of the cross where battlements were built I have seen men walk several times. The whole was sett out & beautified with branches of lead & upon all squares little parcels of lead like coats of arms guilt, & a great ornament to ye place." This handsome cross was destroyed in the great fire of 1675.]

2 John Conquere, 1510 (a. 13); W. Page, 1513 (a. 138); H. Dyxe, 1542 (n. 22).
3 John Osborn, 1513 (a. 125); Thomas Dalbe, 1514 (a. 242); Richard Smyth, 1517 (a. 431). There are thirty-two Rothwell wills in the Northampton probate registry between 1509-1544. In five instances the dedication is given as Holy Trinity; in all others (except in one or two cases where no dedication is given) the dedication is invariably St. Saviour. Among the wills in the Lansdowne MSS. two give St. Saviour, and one Holy Trinity. In Assize roll no. 62a, m. 15 (1 Edward III), the church is called Holy Trinity; and again in 27 Edward III; Richard le Taylour took sanctuary in the church of Holy Trinity of Rothwell (Coroners’ roll, Northants. no. 113, m. 30). The dedication of St. Saviour or Christchurch is always interchangeable with the Holy Trinity, e.g. St. Saviour’s at Dartmouth was dedicated in 1372 to the holy Trinity; the cathedral of Christchurch, Canterbury, is often called the cathedral of the holy Trinity, and there are many other instances of the same alternative.
4 The brass of Edward Saunders still remains outside the west arch of the south chapel.
5 The expression “high altar” here must be a scribe’s error. The high altar was not dedicated in honour of St. Nicholas.

1 Summa Angelica, by Angelus de Clavasio (c. 1450), was a dictionary of theology and canon law, a sort of parson’s vade mecum. Vincentius was probably the commentary of Vincentius Liriensis. The Catholicon here mentioned was doubtless that of Januensis or Johannes de Janua, a Dominican friar who died in 1298. His Catholicon was the standard Latin grammar and dictionary combined of the later middle ages.

2 He was vicar of Warmington from 10th May, 1512, till 1546; and of Brampton by Dingley 11th Oct. 1509, till 1546.

"Lego monasterio sancti Johannis Baptiste juxta Rothwell vjs. viijd" : Henry Draper, 1512 (a. 150). "To the convent off nunyns a browne kowe" : John Osborn, 1513 (a. 125).

This house appears to have been particularly popular with its neighbours. A legacy to the nuns appears in almost every Rothwell will.

SEWARDSLEY: (CISTERCIAN NUNNERY).

SULBY ABBEY: (PREMONSTRATENSIAN CANONS).

Bequests to Abbot and Convent. "To the abbot of Sulby xxs. & to every canon of the same place iiiijd" : Henry Cave, 1507 (P.C.C. 31, Adeane). "I bequeth to the abbath [of Sulby] & the convent xls. of which the abbath shall have xxs. & the convent the other xxs. the which money the baylie of Sulby borrowed of me for my lord" : Wm. Maydwell, vicar of Welford, 1521 (e. 46). "I gyve & bequeath to my lorde abbot of Sulby ij sylver sponys ye which I hadde of hym afore. Item to ye convent of ye abbey of Sulby a brasse pot next to the best to be in the kechyn for to do them [service?] & thei, of their charite, to pray for me" : W. Mynting, 1523 (b. 144). "To the monastery of the blessed Mary of Sulby . . ." : W. Tarry, 1531 (p. 374).

1 The decretals of Gregory IX; the decretals of Boniface VIII, known as the Liber sextus decretalium; and the Clementine constitutions (Clement V) i.e. nearly the whole of the Corpus Juris Canonici. 2 Donatus devocionis is probably the spiritual Donatus, viz. Donatus de Partibus orationis turned into a spiritual catechism.
