Society for the Promotion of Roman Studies

The Roman Society is the leading organization in the United Kingdom for those interested in all aspects of Roman studies, including Roman history, literature, culture, art and architecture down to about A.D. 700. The membership is drawn from over forty countries, all walks of life and ages.

The Society publishes journals and monographs, supports the Institute of Classical Studies Library based at the University of London's Senate House, hosts lectures and conferences, and offers grants and bursaries for a wide range of activities, including summer schools, Latin teaching in schools, museum internships for students, fieldwork projects for six-formers, and excavation projects for academics.
