In the List of Communications to the Society of Antiquaries contained in the "Archæologia Scotia," Vol. IV., Appendix p. 36–38, under the above title, are the following entries. This was in the years 1846 and 1847: at that time the Proceedings had not been commenced, which have since proved the most effectual method of preserving short or occasional Communications, from year to year. On turning over some old papers, I recently found the notes connected with the above Series, which had in a great measure escaped my recollection.

The following are the titles of the earlier numbers of the Series:

1846, February 23.
No. 1. Friar Adam Abel, of Jedburgh, author of the "Rota Temporum."
No. 2. John Law, Canon of St Andrews, one of the Abbreviators of the Scotichronicon.

1847, January 25.
No. 3. Mr John Colville, the supposed author of the "Historie and Life of King James the Sext," published by the Bannatyne Club, in 1825.

1847, February 8.
No. 3. Mr John Colville, continued.
No. 4. Sir William Bruce of Earlshall, in Fife.

On finding these papers, it occurred to me that if these Inquiries were resumed, it might give an opportunity of including the earlier portions of the Series in this year's proceedings.

To the above I proposed at least to have added in continuation—
No. 5. William Elphinston, Bishop of Aberdeen, the supposed Continuator of Fordun's Scotichronicon, in 1463.
No. 6. The Anonymous Chronicle of James II., King of Scots, preserved in Asloan's MS. in the Auchinleck Library.
No. 7. The History of Scotland, 1436 to 1561. By John Lesley, Bishop of Ross.

No. 1. Adam Abel, of Jedburgh, Author of the
"Rota Temporum."

(Feburary 23, 1846.)

There are some points connected with the early Historical Writers of Scotland, to which I purpose occasionally calling the attention of the Society. As the two writers named in the billet of the present meeting may be called obscure, no excuse is required for treating them very briefly. The Rota Temporum, or Wheel of Time, is a work which probably still exists, although all my inquiries have hitherto failed to ascertain the fate of the volume. In one of Sir Robert Sibbald's MS. vols. of collections in the Advocates' Library, entitled "De Historiis Scotis," he simply mentions Abel's work as follows:—

"Chronicon dicta Rota Temporum, the Rota or Wheel of Tyme, by one of the Brothers of the Minors Observants at Jedurgh, is keept in the

In like manner Bishop Nicolson, in the "Scottish Historical Library," published in 1702, says:—

"The Rota Temporum is a Chronological compendium of Scotch History, written by a Brother of the Minor Observants at Jedburgh, in the year 1533. The book is in my Lord Tarbet's library, and is quoted as a good authority by Camden."

The only reference to the "Rota Temporum" I find in Camden's

1 Scottish Historical Library, Lond. 1702, 8vo, p. 110.
2 Britain, N.E., col. 921.
"Britannia," as translated by Dr Philemon Holland (Lond. 1610, folio, Scotland, p. 28), is found under Scotland, Sheriffdom of Stirlingshire, in his account of the Roman wall called Graham's Dyke, in the following paragraph:—

"Now this Wall is commonly called Graham's Dyke; either of Graham a warlike Scot, whose valour was especially seen when the breach was made through it, or else of the hill Grampie, at the foot thereof it stood. The author of Rota Temporum calleth it the wall of Abercorneth, that is, of the mouth of the river Corneth: where, in Bede's time, there was a famous monastery standing, as he hath recorded, upon English ground, but near unto that frith or arm of the sea, which in those days severed the lands of the English and the Picts."

Camden's own words are—"Vocatur autem murus iste vulgo Graham's dyke, vel a Grahamo Scoto bellicose cujus virtus in eo perrumpendo inprimus eminuit, vel a Grampio fronte ad cujus radices visitur. Qui Rota Temporum scripsit, murum de Abercorneth appellat," Ostii Corneth flu. ubi Bedae seculo, &c. (Londini, 1607, p. 700, folio.)

It may, perhaps, be doubted whether it actually was Friar Abel's work to which Camden refers.

In Spottiswood's Account of Religious Houses: Franciscan Friars, second section, Observantines or Mendicant Friars, he says:—

"JEDBURGH, the chief town in Teviotdale, upon the west side of the Jed, which rises from divers burns that meet below the kirk Sudan, and falleth a little below Jedburgh into the river Teviot. There the citizens founded a Convent for those Friars, in the year 1513.

"ADAM ABEL, a famous writer, lived and died in this monastery. He was first a Canon-Regular of Inchaffray, and afterwards became a Gray-Friar in this convent. He wrote a History of our nation in Latin, at the solicitation of George Lord Seton, intitulated Rota Temporum, which was afterwards printed at Rome, by John Lesley, Bishop of Ross, with some small alterations and additions. Thereafter he made an abridgment of it in English; the original whereof was lost at Roslin, at the Revolution, when the mob spoiled the Castle. He began at the creation of the world and ended in the year 1535, in the octave of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary. Afterwards he continued the work until the year 1536.
first leaf he begins—"In the name of the Blessed Trinity, Our Lady, St Francis, and St Augustine." An imperfect copy of this book was in the library of Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh."

How the report originated, of the "Rota Temporum" having been printed at Rome, I cannot imagine. It certainly forms no part of Bishop Lesley's own work "De Origine, Moribus, et Rebus Gestiis Scotorum Libri Decem. Roma, 1578," 4to. There is also some confusion regarding Lord Tarbet's manuscript. Father Augustine Hay, in his Genealogy of the Saint Claires of Rosslyn, dated 1700, states that the monuments and various portions of Rosslyn Chapel were either destroyed or a "little defaced" by the rabble, the eleventh of December 1688, about 10 of the clock att night, after the Castle had been spoiled; where (he adds) I lost several books of note, and amongst others, the original manuscript of Adam Abel, which I had of my Lord Tarbet, then Register." The notice quoted from Bishop Nicolson, 1702, proves that Lord Tarbet's MS. was then in his possession. Sir George Mackenzie, Viscount Tarbet, was created Earl of Cromarty in January 1703; and died 17th August 1714, in the 84th year of his age. In the sale catalogue of what was called a "very valuable collection of books," containing the chief portion of Lord Cromarty's library, sold at Edinburgh in the year 1746, the title occurs of apparently the MS. in question.

It may also be noticed that in a letter of Thomas Hearne (the Oxford antiquary) addressed to James West, November 23, 1731, preserved in the British Museum, he says:—"He believes Lord Pembroke hath also many excellent MSS., but of these I never had any account whateuer, unless it be of one which is the "Rota Temporum," being a piece of Scottish history, but I think there is nothing of note in it but what is in Fordun," &c. If this refers to a MS. of Friar Abel's work, it may probably still be preserved in the splendid library of the Earl of Pembroke at Wilton House, Salisbury.

tish Bishops.

No. II. DE CRONICIS SCOTORUM BREVIA. By John Law, Canon of St Andrews. 1521.

(February 23, 1846.)

This Breviate of the Scotichronicon forms the chief portion of a little manuscript volume preserved in the University Library, Edinburgh. Several years ago, when engaged in preparing the great mass of books in the Old College Library, before its removal to the new buildings, in the year 1827,—a very arduous task, which occupied me for many months,—I brought together the various Manuscripts in the Library, and made a scroll Catalogue of them. This never was completed, there being no prospect at the time of having it printed.

I described the contents of this little volume, AC. c. 26, as follows:—

1. The first article in the volume is a printed tract (wanting the title), 11 leaves. It has, on the last page, this colophon—Explicit Cathalogus Summorum Pontificum. Impressum Parisis pro Joanne Purvo, anno Dni. 1518 die 14 mensis Augusti.” Under this is the name of the donor—“Magister Andreas Cranston, Theologias studiosus, Adolescens optimae spei, hunc Lib. Manuscriptum Bibliothecæ Edinburgæ, dono dedit, anno Domini 1680.”

2. At the foot of the first page of the manuscript is written, “Editum per Johannem Law, Canonicum Sancti Andree.” It commences with an Obituary list—“Nomina Episcoporum Priorum Sancti Andree. Cathalogus Episcoporum Sancti Andree,” &c., 10 leaves. Also

4. Supplementum Cronicarum, etc., 16 leaves.

5. Inicium Scoticronicon (ab Anno Mundi 1668). The running title of this abridgment of the Scoticronicon, is “De Cronicis Scotorum Brevia.” It is continued to the year 1521, on 98 leaves. At the foot of the last page is written, “Et tamen de Regibus, et Temporibus Regni Scotorum, ad annum nostre Salutis, 1521.”

There are, at the end of the volume, sixteen additional leaves, containing lists of the Kings of England and other matters, including a “Continuatio Cronicarum,” 1521 to 1536, apparently in Law’s hand, along... with some miscellaneous notes and extracts; also a copy of a well-known ballad on "The Nine Worthies," beginning "Hector of Troye," &c.

The short Continuation of the Chronicle gives it the appearance of an original work, rather than a mere transcript. In the year 1521, in noticing what Lindesay of Pitscottie called "a great marvel then seen in Scotland, of a child born with two bodies joined together, but Law cautions the reader by adding, "hic non vidimus, sed a videntibus veracituri acceptimus." This Continuation, however, is much less copious than we could have desired; for instance, how much more interesting it would have been had Law recorded any particulars respecting the martyrdom of Patrick Hamilton at St Andrews in 1528, instead of simply noticing the fact of his condemnation for heresy?

This manuscript, which is in a small hand, filled with contractions, was found to contain some particulars relating to a conflict between the Johnstones and the Douglasses in the year 1455; and the volume was to have been produced in evidence in the Annandale Peerage Case, had not the death of Sir George Frederick Johnston of Westerhall, in May 1841, put a stop to all immediate proceedings in that claim.

No particulars of Law's history have been discovered. From Scott's Fasti Ecclesiae Scoticae, vol. ii. p. 283, we find that the donor of the MS. was admitted Minister of Greenock in July 1681. He probably died early. Cranston's successor at least appears to have been appointed in 1683.

No. III. MR JOHN COLVILLE.

My notes regarding Colville, read to the Society in 1847, have not been preserved. The cause of this was that they served for materials when preparing the Memoir prefixed to the volume entitled "Original Letters of Mr John Colville, 1582–1603. To which is added, his Palinode, 1600." Edinburgh, 1858. 4to. This handsome volume was printed at the expense and presented to the Members of the Bannatyne Club by the Earl of Selkirk in the year 1858.

In regard to the anonymous History of King James the Sixth, preserved in various manuscripts, it was first published in 1706 by David Crawford of Drumsoy, historiographer to Queen Anne. He gave it this title—"Memoirs of the Affairs of Scotland, containing a Full and Impartial Account of the Revolution in that Kingdom, begun in 1567. Faithfully published from an authentic MS., by Her Majesty's Historiographer for the Kingdom of Scotland." London, 1706, 8vo. It was republished also, as an authentic history, by Walter Goodall. Edinburgh, 1753. 12mo. Some copies have a new title-page, calling it "the third edition," in 1767. The work itself, being quoted as genuine by Hume and Robertson, obtained a good deal of notoriety in the continuous discussions at a later period, on the alleged guilt or innocence of Mary Queen of Scots.

Mr Malcolm Laing, the historian, having accused Crawfurd as guilty of want of fidelity in publishing this as an original work, which (he says) exhibited fictions invented by Crawfurd, and having traced the MS. which Crawfurd professed to have faithfully published, in order to justify himself, he published the genuine text with the title, "The Historie and Life of King James the Sext (1566–1582). Written towards the latter part of the Sixteenth Century." Edinburgh, 1804. 8vo. "The discovery of the manuscript," he says, "affords a complete detection of the earliest if not the most impudent literary forgery ever practised in Scotland." He adds, "every circumstance in the manuscript, unfavourable to either Mary or to Bothwell, or favourable to their adversaries, is carefully suppressed."

A later edition of the original work, printed for the Bannatyne Club, from a collation of other early MSS. with Continuations, was edited by Thomas Thomson, Esq., V.P. It has this title, "The Historie and Life of King James the Sext; being an account of the affairs of Scotland from the year 1566 to the year 1596; with a short Continuation to the year 1617." Edinburgh, 1825. 4to. But in neither of these editions is there any suggestion made regarding the anonymous Author.

In the volume of Colville's Letters already mentioned, I suggested that he was the original author, as might be inferred from the resemblance of some quotations given by Sir Robert Gordon in 1630, when he refers as one of his authorities, under the year 1581, to "a manuscript wrytten by Mr John Colvin, touching the effairs of Scotland in his tyme."

In tracing out this allusion, which seemed to establish the fact, when compared with the course of Colville's eventful life, I subjoined this note:—"It is but proper to add that my attention to this passage was directed by the late Mr Donald Gregory, Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, whose accuracy and intelligence in investigating matters connected with the Highlands were beyond all praise. I may also take the opportunity to state that some portions of the following memoir and of the above preface formed the subject of two communications read to the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland in 1847."

No further light has been discovered in regard to its Authorship.

I will now merely add that Colville, the second son of Robert Colville of Cleish, was born about the year 1542, and was educated for the Church at the University of St Andrews, where he took his A.M. degree in 1560 or 1561. He first appears as parish minister in the Reformed Church, at Kilbryde, in 1567. He also became Precentor of Glasgow, retaining his connexion with that Church until about 1580, when he resigned to avoid deposition for neglecting his parochial duties. His selfish reason was, "he would not profess poverty." After acting as a busy political agent or informer, he retired to France, and joined the Roman Catholics. He died at Paris, where the English Ambassador, in his correspondence with Secretary Cecill, says: "Old John Colvill, that busy-brained Scot" died in great want and misery, November 1605.

No. IV. SIR WILLIAM BRUCE OF EARLshall.

In resuming these occasional notices of our early Historical writers, my chief object is either to ascertain the authorship of some well-known anonymous works, or to collect any scattered references to other works which are probably still preserved in private collections, although at present they remain undiscovered.

Of the latter class, one is a Chronicle or Diary written towards the middle of the sixteenth century, by Sir William Bruce of Earlshall. This appears from the History or Chronicles of Scotland, "sought, gathered, written, and collected" by Robert Lindesay of Pitscottie, in the year 1575. Among his authorities, he mentions "SIR WILLIAM BRUCE of Earlshall, Knight, who (he says) has written, very justly, all the deeds since Floudeun Field." Pitscottie, in his amusing but very inaccurate compilation, gives no special reference or quotations from his authorities that might have served to identify them.

Another reference to Bruce occurs in a passage in Knox's History of the Reformation, where, in March or April 1558, describing the double dealing of the Queen Regent, by promising, on the one hand, her assistance to the Reformed preachers, "untill some uniform order might be established by a Parliament;" and, on the other hand, by "giving the (Popish) clergy to understand that, so soon as opportunity offered, she should remedy the present disorders; for which (it is added) some say they gave her a large purse, 40,000 lib., says the CHRONICLE gathered by the LAIRD OF ERLISHALL" (Works, vol. i. p. 307). Several copies of Knox omit the words, "sayis the Chronicle," leaving the passage as if the Laird of Earlshall had himself gathered or collected that sum of £40,000.

In the series of Bannatyne Club Books, one edited by Thomas Thomson, Esq., V.P., has the title, "A Diurnal of Remarkable Occurrents that have passed within the Country of Scotland since the Death of King James the Fourth, till the year 1575. From a Manuscript of the Sixteenth Century, in the possession of Sir John Maxwell of Pollock, Baronet." Edinburgh 1833. 4to. The existence of this MS. was first pointed out by Mr John Riddell, advocate, in the course of his researches, as a work of historical importance. The editor says, "Of the author or compiler of the following 'Diurnal,' nothing is known, or seems likely to be discovered." The work itself consists evidently, as Mr Thomson has pointed out, of three distinct portions, yet I imagine they were not originally compiled by one and the same hand. The dates are—

I. From September 1513 to 1553, pp. 1 to 51.

II. From 1557 to June 1572, pp. 51 to 265.

III. In two parts: (1) From 1554 to 1561; (2) from 1571 to 1575, when the volume terminates abruptly, pp. 266 to 350.

Of these we may at least conjecture that the first and part of the third portion, commencing with the sad disaster at Flodden in September 1513, were the work of Sir威廉·布鲁斯。It is to be hoped, from the attention now directed to the preservation of Ancient Unpublished Documents, illustrating our National History, that the work itself may eventually be discovered.1

1 Among the MSS. in the library of John Duke of Lauderdale, sold by auction at London 1692, No. 21 was described: "Jo. Adamson's Brief Chronology of the Affairs of Scotland, beginning 1513 and ending 1572" (upon paper), fol. (Bannatyne Miscellany, vol. ii. p. 154.)
At present I may take this opportunity to add a few words respecting Bruce himself. According to Sir Robert Douglas (Baronage, p. 510), the family of Bruce of Airth, in Stirlingshire, and of Earlshall, in Fife, were lineally descended from Robert, first baron of Clackmannan (in 1359). Sir Alexander Bruce had a charter of the lands of Byrgham, in Berwickshire, 9th February 1485-6. He married Janet, daughter of Sir David Stewart of Rosythe, and had a charter to him and his spouse of the lands of Earlshall, &c., Fifeshire, 28th March 1497, and from this period Earlshall became the place of his residence, and chief title of his family. He died before 13th November 1504. His son married Margaret, a daughter of Meldrum of Seggie, and got a charter under the Great Seal to himself as Sir William Bruce and his spouse, dated 10th February 1539-1540. Another is dated in 1572. Douglas does not mention when he died. He appears, however, from the following inscription, discovered in the churchyard of Leuchars, to have attained the patriarchal age of 98 at the time of his death in 1584-5:

HIC JACET VIE PROBVS AC OMNI MEMORIE DIGNUS, D.N.S. GULIELMUS BRUCEUS, DE ERLISHAL MILES: QUI OBIIT 28 DIES MENSIS JANUARI ANNO DOMINI 1584: ANNOQUE SUE ETATIS 98.

The tombstone is 7 feet 2 inches in length, by 3 feet 10 inches in breadth. Underneath another inscription on the same stone reads—

HEIR LYIS OF AL PIETE ANE LANTERN BRYCHT
SCHR WILLIAM BRUCE OF ERLISHALL KNYCHT.

The mansion house of Earlshall is in the parish of Leuchars, and Presbytery of St Andrews. In early times it had been the property of the Earls of Fife, from whom it derived its title. The building is of acastellated form, and belongs to a later period, and is situated about a mile and a half from the parish church. In vol. iii. of the "History of the County of Fife," by John M. Leighton, and published by Joseph Swan, there is a view of the old house of Earl's Hall, engraved by Joseph Swan from a drawing by James Stewart; and special notice is taken of the great Hall, which had been richly ornamented with heraldic arms, delineations, and inscriptions. I here exhibit drawings of portions to show the style. A similar style of ornament occurs in the old house of Calross, called "The Palace." See a communication by Mr Jervise in the "Proceedings," vol. ii. p. 339; and also, vol. iv. p. 387, the "Notices of the Castle and Painted Room or Hall of Earlshall, in Fifeshire, by A. Jervise." "The Hall itself" (says Mr Jervise), "with its painted ceiling, is the most interesting part of the building; and unfortunately, from the roof not being water-tight, it has suffered considerably from damp, some of the pannelling being broken, and many of the decorations effaced. The room is about 13 feet high, 50 feet long, and 18 feet wide. The ceiling, a sort of circular, is lined with wood; it had originally been divided into upwards of three hundred compartments, in which were painted armorial bearings and objects of natural history, either in animals or plants; also figures representing the Virtues of Faith, Hope, Charity, Prudence, Temperance, Fortitude, and Justice. Black and white are the only colours used, and the Virtues are represented with the usual accompaniments, having the names painted below in Latin." The actual date of the building is recorded along with the arms, carved on the chimney-piece, of Sir William Bruce and his wife, Margaret Meldrum. Aedes has extruuetat D. W. B. ANNO 1546: EXTRUXIT TANDEM W. B. EJUS PRONEPOS ANNO 1617—D. W. B., M.M.—CONTEMNO ET ORNO MENTE MANU. This clearly proves the house to have been founded in the year 1546 by Sir William Bruce, and completed by his great grandson Sir William Bruce in 1617.

I now beg to submit Nos. V., VI., and VII. to the Society:

No. V. WILLIAM ELPHINSTON, BISHOP OF ABERDEEN.

In continuing these Inquiries I purposed that the next number should relate to Bishop Elphinston, one of the reputed Continuators of Fordun's Scotichronicon. Many years ago, in the Album or List of books suggested for publication by the Bannatyne Club, I included this chronicle in five books, or the original text of Fordun, and select portions of the Oxford MS. For this purpose I had more than once examined the Fairfax MS., ascribed to Bishop Elphinston, preserved in the Bodleian Library. The last, or Book XI. of this Chronicle had been printed for the Maitland Club in 1837, in a volume entitled "The Life and Death of King James the First of Scotland," edited by the Rev. Joseph Stevenson. At the sale of George Chalmers's library, 1842, I had acquired an earlier transcript of Books X. and XI. No other copy of what was called Elphinston's Chronicle was then known to exist. Among other MSS. of Fordun's Scotichronicon, I obtained a loan of one preserved in the University Library, Glasgow, and was surprised to find that it was similar to the Oxford MS., but with the earlier date 1461. I afterwards obtained the use of another Scotichronicon from the library of Sir Hugh Hume Campbell, Bart., of Marchmont House, hitherto unnoticed; and found that all the three copies might be said to be identically the same.

Mr Stevenson could not but admit that the Chronicle was erroneously ascribed to the Bishop of Aberdeen, as the writer tells us that he had accompanied the Princess Margaret from Scotland on the occasion of her unfortunate marriage with Louis XI., then known as Dauphin of France. This was in the year 1432; and he also states that he was present at the execution of Joan of Arc in 1436. Now, it is well known that Bishop Elphinston was born in the year 1437, studied at Glasgow, and latterly succeeded to the see of Aberdeen in 1484, where he died in October 1514. Having vainly endeavoured to ascertain, by conjecture or otherwise, the name of the probable Author, this, I imagine, may have led me to leave unfinished the further prosecution of this series of Historical Inquiries.

In commencing the proposed Series of the Early Historians of Scotland, Mr Forbes Skene in 1872 happily became editor of the "Scotichronicon" by its original author. He had previously made a systematic examination of the various known manuscripts of Fordun and his continuators. I know no person who could have done it in a more satisfactory manner, in his classification of the numerous MSS., to distinguish the original text from the several Continuations. This examination served to clear up some perplexities which need not be enlarged upon, being described by Mr Skene himself in his communications to this Society.¹

In regard to the manuscripts ascribed to Elphinston, and of others which I had personally examined, all I had to say has in some measure been anticipated by Mr Skene.² I hope before long the Chronicle erroneously attributed to Bishop Elphinston of Aberdeen will appear in the next issue of the Historians of Scotland. Mr Skene has proved, I think, beyond all doubt, that the true author was MauriCE BuCHANAN, or MauriTiUS de BuCHANAN, who was in France, and witnessed, as he tells us, the sad fate of Joan of Arc at Rouen in 1431; while he held the office of Treasurer to the Princess Margaret, from 1432 till her death in 1445, and compiled his Chronicle in the Priory of Pluscardine in 1461. This fact I consider as an important discovery, and in tracing the history of the author he has cleared up a point of some importance in the Literary history of Scotland, and identified the Chronicle with the "Liber Pluscardensis."

No. VI. A SHORT CHRONICLE OF THE REIGN OF JAMES II., KING OF SCOTS.

This short Chronicle of an obscure period of Scottish history was printed and edited by Thomas Thomson, Esq., advocate, about the year 1817 or 1818, for private circulation. Very few copies, however, were distributed by Mr Thomson, as he purposed to subjoin notes and illustrations, but this intention never was fulfilled. In the manuscript from which it was taken, it has the following titles:—"Ane Addicioun of Scottis Corniklis and Deidis," and "Heir followis ane shorth Memoriale of the Scottis Corniklis for addieioun."

In the printed text of the Chronicle this ends on page 28, when the Editor entitles it as above, "A Short Chronicle of the Reign of James the Second, King of Scots," and says:—"The historical fragment which forms the first part of this collection has been given with a scrupulous adherence to the original manuscript, not only in the inartificial and apparently accidental arrangement of events, but also in the errors of fact and of date, as well as in those of transcription which it exhibits. In that which follows, the same materials, with a few unimportant omissions, have been disposed somewhat more exactly in the order of time; some of the erroneous dates and accidental mistakes of transcription have been rectified," &c.

From this arrangement it appears that the Chronicle extends from the year 1436 to 1460–1. It is usually called the Auchinleck Chronicle, from the circumstance that the MS. volume from which it was printed belonged to the Library at Auchinleck, Ayrshire.

This manuscript is a large folio volume, written on paper, consisting of miscellaneous pieces in Prose and Verse, collected and transcribed from MS. and printed copies towards the close of the reign of James the Fourth, or before the year 1514, by John Asloan, who appears to have been a Writer or Notary at Edinburgh. According to a "Table of Contentis of the Buke," on the first leaf of the volume, numbered from cap. i. to lxxi., this Chronicle formed number xviii. of the collection. Most unfortunately the volume itself is defective of no less than thirty-four of these numbers, and these, for the most part, cannot be otherwise supplied. The transcriber, at the end of each article, besides the name of the author when known, usually adds this attestation, "Explicit per M. Jo. Asloan," or "Scriptum per Manura Johannis Asloan." That he uses "M." not in its usual signification as Magister is certain, as in another place he gives the attestation in the vernacular words, thus—"Written be the hand (per manum) of John Asloan." This, however, is a matter of no great moment.

The early history of Asloan’s manuscript is not known. On the flyleaf is the autograph signature, "Alex. Boswell, 1730," indicating the time when it came into his possession, no doubt in its very mutilated state.

I do not recollect having seen Asloan’s manuscript in its original state. It was brought to Edinburgh early in the present century by Sir Alexander Boswell, when the leaves were inlaid by a skilful person employed on such work, and bound in the General Register House under the superintendence of Thomas Thomson, Esq., Deputy Clerk Register. The manuscript, along with some others from the same library, remained in Mr Thomson’s hands for many years, until they were reclaimed by the late Mr James A. Maconochie, advocate, as one of the trustees of Sir Alexander’s son, the late Sir James Boswell, Bart.

Alexander Boswell, Esq., of Auchinleck, was the representative of an ancient family of that name: he passed as advocate at the Scottish Bar, 29th December 1729; was raised to the Bench, and took his seat 15th February 1754 by the title of Lord Auchinleck, and died 25th August 1782, aged 76. His son James, the well-known biographer of Dr Johnson, died in 1795, leaving two sons, both of whom were eminent as literary characters.
The eldest son, Alexander, born in 1775, was created a Baronet in 1820, and was killed in an unfortunate duel 25th March 1822. The second son, James Boswell, a barrister-at-law in the Temple, is known as editor of Malone's important edition of the "Plays and Poems of Shakespeare," in 21 vols. The advertisement is dated "Temple, May 1821." Mr. Boswell died about eight months after.

To return to the Chronicle, it was undoubtedly the work of an unknown author who flourished in the reign of King James the Second. From the title "for Addicione," we might infer that the original had been written on the margins of some special Scotichronicon. Asloane, who transcribed it, could not have the slightest claim to be considered the author. It has, like Law's Manuscript, No. II., obtained some notoriety from its containing a passage relating to the Johnstones of Annandale, and was formerly (in 1841) produced as evidence in a Peerage case not yet determined.

No. VII. THE HISTORY OF SCOTLAND. By John Lesley, Bishop of Ross, 1570.

The History of Scotland, from 1436 to 1561, by Bishop Lesley, which was written and presented to Mary Queen of Scots in the year 1570, remained unpublished and scarcely known till 1830. The importance of the work, however, suggested its publication for the BANNATYNE CLUB, by the Vice-President, Thomas Thomson, Esq., advocate, from a manuscript in the possession of the Earl of Leven and Melville. It is scarcely necessary to observe that this work is entirely different from Bishop Lesley's subsequent Latin history "De Origine, Moribus, et Rebus gestis Scotorum, Lib. X.,” also dedicated to His Royal Mistress, and printed at Rome in the year 1578, 4to. This volume has been reprinted, but not translated.

Of the vernacular history there were three MSS. known, nearly of the same age. The Leven MS. being partially defective, I volunteered, as Honorary Secretary of the Club, to go to Oxford, and to collate the text of the volume which forms one of Archbishop Laud's MSS. in the Bodleian Library. It is unnecessary for me to say one word as to the editing of the volume by a gentleman who so long held the important office of Deputy Clerk Register, and was reckoned the most eminent and judicious of our Historical Antiquaries. He has fully explained the history and authenticity of the work itself, which, indeed, has never been called in question. In the preliminary notice Mr Thomson refers to the third MS., when he merely says:—"In the library at Dupplin, there is a copy of the work, of which only a transient inspection has been permitted by the present owner. It appears to be nearly of the same age with that of Archbishop Laud in the Bodleian Library."

To explain this allusion, I may add, it was most desirable, before completing the printed volume for the Club, to ascertain by comparison in how far the printed sheets corresponded with the MS. at Dupplin (the Earl of Kinnoull, although a member of the Club, having refused the application to have the MS. sent, even for a limited time, to Edinburgh).
I proceeded thither, in the neighbourhood of Perth, to make the comparison, and I sent the result to Mr Thomson with the following note:—

"The manuscript of Bishop Lesley's History in the library at Dupplin is a folio volume of 144 leaves, numbered, and evidently written by an English scribe towards the close of the sixteenth or early part of the following century. It corresponds in so many minute particulars with the MS. of the same work in the Bodleian Library that it is not improbable both may have been copied from the same original, although not that of the Author. The volume is partially mutilated, as in consequence of having stood in a damp place in the old library at Dupplin, the top corners of several of the leaves have mouldered away, or been rendered almost illegible. Of the two transcripts the Dupplin MS. is the least accurate, not merely as to actual mistakes committed, but in the occasional omission of words, and in one or two instances of an entire paragraph. On the whole it is evident, that had the Earl of Kinnoull granted the use of this copy when the book was in the printer's hand, it would not have proved of any material advantage, the deficiencies in the Leven MS.
having previously been supplied from the Oxford manuscript.

"The volume is bound in old calf, of the latter part of the seventeenth century, and is lettered on the back 'A Manuscript of Scotland.' At the end of the volume is a long Latin poem, written in a later hand, entitled 'Iter Boreale.' It fills twelve pages, beginning 'Quid mihi cum Musis? quid cum Borealtibus oris?" &c.

ROBERT HORN, Esq., Vice-President, in the Chair.

A Ballot having been taken, the following Gentlemen were duly elected Corresponding Members, viz.:—

ARTHUR LAURENSON, Esq., Lerwick, Author of "Hamarheint."
D. MURRAY LYON, Esq., Ayr.

And the following were duly elected Fellows, viz.:—

WILLIAM BELL of Gribdae, Esq.
ARCHIBALD BROWN, Esq., Advocate, P.C.S.
JOHN MACLAREN Esq., Publisher, Edinburgh.
WILLIAM M. OGILVIE, Esq., Banker, Lochee.
GEORGE W. T. OMOND, Esq., Advocate.
JAMES SANDERSON, Esq., Deputy-Inspector of Hospitals, Madras Army.

The following Donations to the Museum and Library were laid on the table, and thanks voted to the Donors:—

(1.) By W. FETTES DOUGLAS, Esq., R.S.A.

Arrow-Head of Brown Flint, 2\(\frac{1}{2}\) inches long, with stem, unbarbed, flattened on one side and swelling to a central ridge on the other, found at Perugia, Italy.

Arrow-Head of Yellowish Flint, 2\(\frac{1}{8}\) inches in length, with stem and without barbs, oval in the cross section, found at Velletri in Italy.

Arrow-Head of Bronze 1\(\frac{3}{4}\) inches in length, \(\frac{3}{4}\) inch in greatest width, slightly barbed, and with flattened tang half an inch in length. Arrow-heads of bronze are extremely rare, and this is the only specimen in the Museum. It was found at Velletri in Italy, in the same locality as the flint arrow-head previously described.

Bronze Mirror, 3\(\frac{3}{4}\) inches diameter, finely engraved on the concave surface, with a representation of two groups of figures standing in front of a temple, found at Orvieto, Italy.
DONATIONS TO THE MUSEUM.

Two Bone Pins, 3½ and 3¼ inches in length, with globular heads, and the stem of the pin swelling slightly towards the head, found in excavations in Rome.

!Fig. 2. Arrow-Head of Bronze from Velletri, Italy (actual size).

Small Bottle of Roman Glass, 3¼ inches high, 2½ inches in greatest width, with long narrow neck and vertical ribbed ornaments round the bulge.

Brass Medal, cast, Coffin and Pall Bearers in relief, with the words, MEMENTO MORI engraved above it, and the date, 1649, below; on the reverse ABSENT· 6· STV· between two floral scrolls.

(2.) By LAUDER LINDSAY, Esq., M.D., Gilgal, Perth.

Circular Ball of Dark-coloured Clay Stone, dug from the auriferous drift in the progress of the gold workings at Kildonan, Sutherlandshire, in 1869. It is a plain ball 3 inches in diameter, and of the same type as some of those described by Dr John A. Smith in the Proceedings, vol. xi. p. 49. Its surface is not smoothened or polished, and probably never has been so.

Pendant of Jade from New Zealand, 5¼ inches in length, pierced with a hole at one end for suspension.

Maori Adze or Celt of Greyish Porphyritic Stone, 4 inches long, 2¼ inches broad, and about ¾ inch thick, found in cutting a road near Abbot's Creek Bridge, Otago, New Zealand.
Maori Adze or Celt, of Black Basaltic Stone, $3\frac{3}{4}$ inches in length, $2\frac{1}{2}$ inches in breadth, and $1\frac{1}{4}$ inch in thickness, found in Saddlehill Bush, Otago, New Zealand.

Iceland Lady's Head-dress—a very small black cap with tassel.

(3.) By R. M. Douglas, Esq.

Flint Lock Tinderbox 4$\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, wanting the stock, from Elgin. The box is of copper and the flint-lock of iron, both very strongly made.

(4.) By George Sim, Esq., F.S.A. Scot., Curator of Coins.

Polished Celt of Greyish Micaceous Sandstone, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, $2\frac{1}{4}$ inches broad, $\frac{3}{4}$ inch thick, ground flat on the butt end, found at King's Muir, near Forfar.

Socket Stone, $3\frac{1}{2}$ inches long, of Reddish Quartz, with a hole about 1 inch wide on both sides of the stone, in which a revolving spindle has worked.

Thumb-Ring, Silver Gilt, and having knobs round the circumference on which are separately engraved the letters of the inscription IESVS NAZAR. It was found in the ruins of Restennet Priory, near Forfar.

(5.) By Mr William Gray.

Socket Stone of a Gate found near the Brough of Clickamin, Shetland. It is a boulder of sandstone 16 inches long, 10 inches broad, and 4 inches thick. The hole made in the stone by the working of the wooden pivot of the gate is 5 inches diameter at the surface, narrowing to an inch and a half in the centre of the stone. When the hole became too deep the stone was turned, so that the holes made from the opposite surfaces have worked through to each other.

Urn of food-vessel type, but with the upper part broken away, found in subsoiling a field near the village of Moulin in Perthshire, at a place called Cladh na Ghuiminich Rua, or "the burying-ground of the Red Cumyn." The urn has been 7\frac{1}{2} inches diameter. The sloping part towards the bottom is ornamented with chevrons made by a comb or tool with eight teeth. Above this the decoration consists of a group of lines of impressions made by twisted cord alternating with a band of triangular impressions. The upper part of the vessel was ornamented with oblong projecting knobs at intervals round the circumference.

Stone Cup, rudely hollowed out of a piece of mica schist, and with a rude handle, found on the moor between Strath Tummel and Strath Tay. The stone measures 5 inches by 5 inches, and is about 2 inches thick. The hollow made in it is 3 inches diameter, and about 1\frac{1}{2} inches in depth.
