THE MASTERS OF WORK TO THE CROWN OF SCOTLAND, WITH
THE WRITS OF APPOINTMENT, FROM 1529 TO 1768. By REV.
R. S. MYLNE, M.A., B.C.L. OXON., F.S.A. LOND., HON. FELLOW OF THE ACADEMY OF S. LUKE, ROME.

The Principal Master of Work was a recognised officer of the King's Court from the time of James V. to the death of Queen Anne.

Like other similar posts, it was tenable for life, was invested with a fixed yearly fee, and certain small perquisites. That learned writer Mr Wyatt Papworth observes, in his Notes on Superintendents of English Buildings in the Middle Ages,—"The Master Masons were generally the Architects during the Mediaeval Period. The Master of Works may have been so." Moreover, though the particular part played by the Master of Works varied greatly according to his own personal ability and individual character, we may yet note that frequently he had more control over the finances than the Master Masons, and in some instances was more of a courtier.

In the earliest records the term is used with much vagueness, and some variety of meaning. Afterwards, when the royal power becomes dominant, on the fall of the old baronage, both lay and ecclesiastical, there is one Principal Master of Works to the Crown.

Our object upon the present occasion is to endeavour to trace, with the help of the original documents preserved in the Register House, the constant succession of the King's Masters of Works from the sixteenth to the eighteenth century. To illustrate from contemporary history, to give a brief sketch of the career of each successive official, would doubtless be interesting, but is beyond the scope of the present paper: time does not permit.

We may note, however, that eventually this office was to all intents and purposes merged in H.M. Office of Works.

The first writ under the Privy Seal is addressed to Sir James Nycholay, appointing him Master of Work at Stirling, while we know from the Books of Royal Accounts preserved in the Register House that VOL. XXX.
John Scrymgeour was Master of Work to King James V. about the same time; and though no writ of his appointment is preserved, yet his formal nomination is found in the Book of Royal Accounts for the year 1537.

In the Lord High Treasurer's Accounts we find an entry under the date 1473, in which the Book of Accounts delivered to the Masters of Work is mentioned, though the book itself is lost. The actual amount of money seems large for those early days—£753, 7s. 5d.

There is reason to believe that Robert Cochrane, Earl of Mar, became Master of Work about this time. The strange story of his tragic death at the Bridge of Lauder is well known to every Scotsman.

Other early Masters of Work, whose names have been recorded, may here be noted.

In 1425 John of Walton was appointed to the charge of Linlithgow Palace, and was succeeded by Robert Wedale, Robert Livingstone, John Holmes, and John Weir, and then in 1467 by Henry Livingstone.

In 1496 Sir Thomas Smyth, a priest, was Master of Work within the Castle of Stirling, and Walter and John Merlioun were masons acting under his directions. He was succeeded by the Abbot of Lindores, and then came Sir W. Betoune and Andrew Atoune.

In 1494 Sir George Galbrathe was Master of Work to the Barge.

A few more names might be given, but it seems more to the point to note that these Masters of Work were for the most part appointed to the charge of particular buildings.

During a considerable portion of the reign of King James V., Alexander Mylne, Abbot of Cambuskeneth, possessed much influence over the expenditure upon the royal castles and palaces, and it is from the early years of the sixteenth century that we can trace without difficulty the perpetual succession of both the Principal Master of Work and the Principal Master Mason to the King. The history of the Master Masons to the Crown of Scotland was published in 1893.

We now give a complete list of the Masters of Work to the King, compiled with great labour and trouble from the original MSS., often discovered after long search and patient examination of the old documents and early records. Where the writ was in Latin, as is usual in the Great Seal Register, a translation is in each case given.

From the year 1700 the appointments are always made "during pleasure only," showing the reduced importance of the office, and the liability to removal of the official. The three last writs of the eighteenth century come close together during the opening years of the reign of George III., and eventually the administration of the royal castles and palaces becomes vested in H.M. Office of Works.

The original documents give the names of twenty-four Masters of Work in succession, and record twenty-two writs of appointment.

It is not quite certain that John Scrymgeour was appointed by exactly the same form of writ as the other Masters, and it is certain that William Schaw's writ is non-existent at the present time. The complete list is subjoined.

MASTERS OF WORK TO THE CROWN OF SCOTLAND, APPOINTED UNDER WRIT OF THE PRIVY SEAL.

1529 Sir James Nycholay.
He had charge of Stirling Castle.

John Scrymgeour.
He had charge of work at Falkland, Linlithgow, &c. See Mylne's Master Masons, pp. 43, 44, 49.

1602 David Cuninghame of Robertland.

1607 James Murray.
A similar grant was passed under the Great Seal, May 2, 1614.
1615 Walter Murray.
   He is appointed Assistant Master of Works.
   In the document there is mention of Sir W. M'Dougall, who executed work at the chapel of Holyrood under Queen Mary, for which payments occur in the royal accounts.

1630 James Murray of Kilbaberton and Anthonie Alexander.
   A. Alexander was son of Sir W. Alexander of Menstrie, Secretary for Scotland.
   A similar grant was passed under the Great Seal, April 1, 1629.
   The aforesaid grants are both confirmed in 1634, under the Privy Seal on January 9, and under the Great Seal on December 15.
   Special mention is made of the King's pleasure at the careful preparations for his coronation in the previous year, and "the repairing of the Church of Halyrudhous, quhilk was altogether ruynous, quhairin his majesties coronation was maist royallie and solemplie done."
   Great care and caution is also to be exercised in the selection of fit and reliable workmen at the King's works, and especially at his castles and fortresses.

1632 William Govane of Cardrona and James Murray.
   Govane married the daughter of Sir James Murray of Kilbaberton, knighted on the occasion of the coronation of King Charles I. James Murray was his son.
   They are made Joint Assistant Masters of Works on the decease of Walter Murray.
   Sir James Murray died in December 1634.

Masters of Work to the Crown of Scotland, Appointed Under Writ of the Great Seal.

N.B.—The original documents in the Great Seal Register are in Latin.

1671 Sir William Bruce of Balcaskie, Baronet.
   He played a leading part in politics after the restoration of Charles II., and acted with Robert Mylne, Master Mason, in erecting the present Palace of Holyrood. See ch. ix. and x. in Mylne's Master Masons.

1689 Sir Archibald Murray of Blackbarony, Baronet.

Charles, by the grace of God King of Scotland, England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, to all his worthy men to whom our present letters shall come, greeting. Know ye, whereas we are earnestly desirous that certain of our palaces and castles in our kingdom of Scotland, which lately by the injuries of a calamitous time are either altogether fallen down, or become unfit for dwelling in, should be built and restored, particularly our Royal Palace of Holyroodhouse, and because it is expedient for this purpose that some fit person should be appointed, who should superintend the appointment of workmen, and the building and direction of the said works, and we having sufficiently understood the integrity of soul, faithfulness and remarkable ability of our well beloved servitor Sir William Bruce of Balcasky, knight baronet, and his skill in architecture and other qualifications worthy of such a trust: Therefore we have made, constituted, and ordained, and by the tenor hereof make, constitute, and ordain the foresaid Sir William Bruce our General Overseer and Superintendent to take care of and attend to all works at our said palace of Holyroodhouse, and such other buildings and palaces belonging to us within our said kingdom as we, by warrant directed to the commissioners of our Treasury shall ordain to be repaired: With full power to the foresaid Sir William Bruce to substitute and create deputes under him, one or more, as the said work shall require (for whom he shall be bound to answer), and all other persons necessary, such as masons, wrights, glaziers, slaters, plumbers, smiths, painters, plasterers, and all other workmen of whatever kind, pioneers or barrowmen, as shall seem to him expedient, and to make use of them on all occasions and admit them to work, at such rates and prices and upon such conditions as it shall please him to agree on with them: Which Sir William shall not be bound to make use of or admit anyone under the name of our masters in any of the said crafts or occupations. To whom also it shall be lawful to summon before him the foresaid workmen, to render an account of their work, and to pay to them what was agreed and covenanted on between them, as resources and power shall be had to that effect: Provided always that the foresaid Sir William Bruce shall render an account and reckoning to the lords of our Treasury, and their successors or others whomsoever to be ordained by us, of the agreements to be entered into by him, and of whatever sums of money to be received by him and expended, whenever he shall be required: And that he shall be bound to follow such orders, directions, and instructions as he shall receive from us, or the said commissioners of our Treasury and their successors in our name, in time to come: And during the time of the said reparations, we will and ordain, for the advantage of our service and the better administration of the said works, that our foresaid General Superintendent shall have the use of some parts of our said palaces and the keys of the same for his proper habitation, and for the habitation of his deputes, under masters, keepers of storehouses, and all other officers necessary to be admitted by him to any of the said works: And also for the better keeping and preservation of the whole materials and tools.
necesary for this effect to be laid up and provided: Without prejudice of the rights granted to the heritable keepers of the said palaces after the said repairs and buildings shall be finished, which shall in nowise be infringed or prejudiced:
With power also to the said Sir William Bruce, during the space aforesaid, to do all other things necessary and requisite, as shall to him seem expedient; and to punish, mulct, incarcerate, and amerce delinquents and transgressors at the said works; and courts by himself or his deputes (as oft as need shall be), for this purpose within the said palaces, houses, and precincts thereof to us pertaining, to fix, hold, and continue; clerks, serjeants, officers, and other members of court necessary, to make, create, appoint, and cause to be sworn as is fit:
Moreover, we prohibit and interdict all other persons to molest the said workmen or their servants for any quarrel or enormity to be committed by them within the said works, and which have a relation to the same, during the time in which they actually remain in our service: And also we have given, granted, and disponed, and by the tenor hereof give, grant, and dispose to the foresaid Sir William Bruce the salary of three hundred pounds money sterling, to be paid to him yearly at the terms of Whitsunday and Martinmas by equal portions, Beginning and uplifting for the first at the term of Whitsunday next to come in this instant year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and seventy one, and so thereafter in time to come every term till the same be retracted by us: Moreover, we hereby charge the lords of our Treasury, or our principal Treasurer or depute and their successors, to prescribe a method for preparing and making payment to the foresaid Sir William Bruce of the said annual salary, which shall be allowed to them in their accounts: Which salary shall be in full content and satisfaction to the foresaid Sir William Bruce of the casualties formerly enjoyed by our masters of works, to wit, scaffolding, old furnishings, and materials of the said works which have been demolished and otherwise by us disposed of, and of all other emoluments and casualties in any wise due by the said office, And in satisfaction of all other expenses to be expended in the said administration. In witness whereof we have commanded our great seal to be appended to these presents at our Court of Windsore Castle the third day of the month of June the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred and seventy one, and of our reign the twenty
