Much valuable and interesting local information may be obtained from the Anglo-Saxon grants of lands, of which a large collection, called "Codex Diplomaticus Ævi Saxonici," edited by that erudite Anglo-Saxon scholar J. M. Kemble, Esq., was published by the English Historical Society between 1839 and 1848.

These grants generally contain very precise descriptions of the boundaries of the lands granted; and it is at least curious to trace those boundaries after the lapse of a thousand years, on a modern map, and to remark how many of the ancient landmarks are still remaining in the names of places, farms, hills, valleys, mounds, roads, rivers, streams, trees, stones, and other remarkable objects, which in all ages have been used to point out the extent of landed possessions and jurisdictions.

Mr. Kemble, in his preface to the third volume of the "Codex," says:—"In general, certain well-defined natural objects, as a hill, a stream, or a remarkable tree, furnished the points by which the boundary-line was directed; when these were wanting, a hedge, a ditch, a pit or well, or the mound of an ancient warrior, served the purpose; even posts of wood and stone appear to have been common; and upon many of these it is probable that inscriptions were found. It may safely be assumed that originally these boundaries were under the protection of Wōden; and various traces of his influence yet remain."

Nor was this feeling peculiar to the pagan Saxons. "Terminalis" was a surname of Jupiter, because he presided over the boundaries of lands, until the worship of the god "Terminus" was introduced by Numa, who persuaded his subjects that the limits of their lands and estates were under the immediate inspection of Heaven. The temple of Terminus was on the Tarpeian Rock, and he was represented at first, with a large square stone, but afterwards with a human head, without feet or arms, to intimate that he never moved, wherever he might be placed. In his honour annual feasts, called Terminalia, were held at Rome, in the month of February, when it was usual for the peasants to assemble near the principal landmarks which separated their fields, and after they had crowned them with garlands and flowers, to make libations of milk and wine, and to sacrifice a lamb or a young pig, and to sprinkle the landmark with the blood of the victim, or sometimes with pure oil.

The sacred character of landmarks is also recognised in Holy Writ—

"Thou shalt not remove thy neighbour's landmark, which they of old time have set in thine inheritance, which thou shalt inherit in the land that the Lord thy God giveth thee to possess it." (Deut. xix. 14.)

2 The custom still existing, of a periodical perambulation of the boundaries of parishes, is a relic of a similar ancient practice in this country, although the libations are now reserved for the parish dinner after the fatigues of the day; and instead of sacrificing a lamb or a young pig, some luckless boy is bumped to make him remember the boundary-mark.
"Cursed be he that removeth his neighbour's landmark." (Deut. xxvii. 17. Commination.)

Some remarkable instances of minute descriptions of landmarks are afforded by the grants of Friðwald, King Ælfred (the Great, or, as he is called in one of the charters, the wise king), and Edward the Confessor, to Chertsey Abbey.

The charters of Friðwald and Ælfred are without dates, but Friðwald's charter is placed by Mr. Manning in A.D. 666, and by Mr. Kemble before 675. The grant by King Ælfred is placed by Mr. Kemble between two grants, dated respectively 889 and 891, and that of King Edward the Confessor in 1062.

The charters are in Latin, but the descriptions of the land-limits are (as usual) in the Anglo-Saxon language.

The boundaries of Chertsey and Thorpe, as set forth in the Charter of King Ælfred, comprehend the manors of Crocford and Woodham, which the boundary as described in the Charter of Friðwald omits; but in the last-mentioned charter the boundaries of Egham and Chobham are given, which are not contained in Ælfred's grant.

These charters were printed in the "Monasticon," and in the "Codex Diplomaticus," from a MS. in the Cottonian Library at the British Museum, written, as supposed, about the time of King Stephen; and the English or Anglo-Saxon is very corrupt; which increases the difficulty of rendering it into modern English, and will, I trust, afford an apology for the numerous imperfections of the following notes.

My scanty knowledge of the modern local names has been derived chiefly from three maps of the county of Surrey; viz. that by Rocque in 1762, Greenwood's map of Surrey, and the Ordnance Survey; but I have received valuable assistance from the Rev. J. C. Clark, of Chertsey, and other gentlemen, to whom I beg to express my thanks.

By the first of these charters, Friðwald, Subregulus or Viceroy of the province of Surrey under Wlfare, King of Mercia, gave, granted, and transferred for augmentation of the monastery, which was first established under King Egbert, and called "Cirotesege" (Chertsey), the land of two hundred inhabitants, for support of the same monastery, and five mansions or dwellings in the place called Dorp (Thorpe). And he not only gave and confirmed the land, but he delivered himself and his only in obedience to Erkenwald the abbot; and the land comprised altogether three hundred inhabitants. And, moreover, near the river which is called Thames, extending from the bank of the river to the limit which is called "the Old Fosse," that is, "Fullingadich," and in other part of the same, from the bank of the river to the other extremity of the said province which is called "Sunninges" (Sunning). There were also belonging to the same land, ten inhabitants near the port of London, where ships resort, on the south side, near the public way.

5 Wlfare, or Wulhere, was king of Mercia from A.D. 659 to 675.
6 Erkenwald was a son of Offa, king of the East Saxons, and was abbot of Chertsey from 666 to 675, when he was elected bishop of London, and retained that see till his death in 685. He was buried at St. Paul's, and was afterwards canonized as St. Erkenwald.—See Weever's Funeral Monuments, p. 358.
7 Probably in Southwark, in which place a harbour where ships resorted is mentioned in Domesday Book.

It does not appear from any other document that the abbey had lands in Windlesham. In Manning and Bray's "Surrey," it is suggested that Hunewal'sham is Hersham, in Walton-on-Thames. I do not know what Bishop this was.
TO CHERTSEY ABBEY.

There were, however, divers names of the same lands aforesaid; to wit,—“Ciroteseg" (Chertsey), “Dorp” (Thorpe), “Egeham" (Egham), “Chebeham” (Chobham), “Getinges” (Totinges or Tooting?), “Muleseg” (Moulsey), “Wodeham” (Woodham), “Hunnewaldesham” (Windlesham), as far as the limit aforesaid. All which he gave and confirmed to Erkenwald, and for erecting the monastery, that he (the abbot) and his successors might intercede for the soul of the donor; with all fields, woods, meadows, pastures, and rivers, and all other things of right belonging to the monastery of St. Peter, chief of the Apostles, at “Ciroteseg.” And if any one should attempt anything against that his donation, let him be separated from all Christian society, and deprived of participation in the kingdom of heaven.

The charter is attested as follows:—“And I Friðwald, who am the donor (together with Erkenwald the abbot), for ignorance of letters have made the sign of the cross.”

The following witnesses also attested the grant by the sign of the cross; viz. Friðwric, Ebbe, Egwald, Badwald, Ceadde. Likewise Humfrey, the bishop, at the request of Abbot Erkenwald, subscribed with his own hand. And these are the Subreguli, who all subscribed their marks beneath; viz. Friðewold, Osric, Wigherd, Æthelwold.

And that this donation might be firmly and strongly established, this charter was confirmed by Wlfare, King of the Mercians, and even he placed his hand upon the altar, in the town which is called Thame, and with his hand subscribed the sign of the cross.

These things were done near the town of Friðuuald, near the aforesaid foss of "Fullingadich," about the kalends of March.

Then follows the description of the boundary of the lands granted by the charter.

This is the five-hide book 8 to "Cerotesige,“ and to "Dorpe," which King FriSewald gave to Christ, and St. Peter, and Abbot Erkenwald, in full freedom in all things within the prescribed landmarks which be written in this book.

This is the landmark to "Cerotesige," and to "Dorpe;” that is, first from "WaiemuZe” 9 up endlong "Weie" 10 to "Waigebrugge;” 11 from "Waigebrugge" within the old mill-stream, midward of the stream to the old "Heresstrete;” 12 and along the "Stræt" to "Woburnbrugge,” 13 and along the stream to the great "Withig;” 14 from the great Withy, along the stream to the pool above "Crocford;” from the head of the pool straight on to an alder; from the alder straight on by "Wertwallen” 15 to the "Heresstrate," and along the road to "Curtenstapele;” 16 from Curtenstapele along the road to the "Hore Thorn."

In the Charter of King Ælfræd, the boundary is 8 The Book of the Five Hides of Land.

9 From the mouth of the Wey, where it flows into the Thames.
10 Up along the Wey: the charter of Ælfræd says up midstream.
11 Weybridge.
12 The old military way or high road.
13 Woburnbridge.
14 Withy, or Willow.
15 Wertwallen, the foot of a hill covered with trees or shrubs.—Kemble's Glossary, in preface to vol. iii. of Codex, p. xliii.
16 Curtenstapele (the Gaol post ?); Cwerten, A.S. a prison, and stapel, a prop or support, an upright post.—Kemble.
described as going from Weybridge southward, up midstream, to “Boggesley,” from “Boggesley” to “Wudham” suðrihte (southward) into “Halewick,” and so forth, between the land of Halewick and the land of “Wintredeshulle,” westerly, to “Fullbrook,” it goeth between “Fecingelye” and the “uergðe;” and so forthright to the “hore-stone;”

17 I should take this to be Bowsley; but we are now going up the Wey, and Bowsley is too far off.

18 This should be Woodham, but the situation does not agree, if the next is right.

19 Halewick, is Holywick or Hollick farm.

20 Wintredeshulle is Wintred’s-hill (whoever he might have been). There is a house in Byfleet called “Wintersell,” which was part of the Oatlands estate sold in 1846, and a farm in the parish of Byfleet called “Wintreshulle.” There was a William de Wintreshulle, who was steward of the King’s house, regn. Henry III.—(Pat. Rolls, 55 Henry III.)

21 Fullbrook I take to be the “Fullingadich” mentioned in the Charter of Friþuwald, near to which was his town, or tun, that is, his inclosed dwelling, or homestead. Mr. Clark informs me that there is now a bridge called “Fullbridge,” at a spot where the Shere water-pond became contracted; and it would seem that what was anciently called Fullbrook, was afterwards called Sherewater. This pond was drained and planted about 40 years ago.

22 Fecingelye, Mr. Clark thinks, may be Aningsley; but he has since informed me that there is a name of a place something like Fecingelye not far from the Hermitage in Horsell.

23 The tilled land.

24 A Hoar-stone is generally an ancient erect stone pillar, rude, unsculptured, and rough as from the quarry, and called a hoar-stone from its age and whiteness; the adjective being the same that we apply to a gray or hoary head,—a hoar-frost, &c. They were usually set up as memorials of some remarkable event (as Jacob set up a stone in Bethel as a memorial of his dream), or to mark the burial-place of some famous chieftain. In the 25th vol. of “Archeologia” there is a long and interesting paper on hoar-stones by Mr. Hamper, who has employed a great deal of research on the subject, and gives a long list of hoar-stones in various parts of this kingdom; among which he notices that which is referred to in the charter before us. He considers them nothing more and from the hore-stone into the "Dernesford;" and so forth, westrigte (westward), endlong streme into the more at "Estwode's end;" and so up between Estwode and "Otersthaghe," to the "Hore Thorn." than landmarks, deriving their name from Harz (Armoric), a bound or limit; as, Men hars, a bound-stone. There was formerly at Pentecost, in Chobham, a white cross; but that is at some distance from our boundary, if it be, as I suppose, the same that I find in the maps as Paneras or Pancrets farm; and I should rather suppose the hoar-stone to have been at the angle formed by the boundary of the parish of Chertsey, at the Canal on Woking Common.

25 Durnford, where there is now a bridge over the Bourn, on the road between Ottershaw Park and Omensley or Anningsley farm.

26 The more or marsh at Eastwood's End must have been at the west side of Ottershaw.

27 The Otter's house, which is plain enough, and proves the great antiquity of the name of that seat.

28 The old white thorn. There is nothing more beautiful in nature than a fine old white-thorn tree in full blossom; and those who are aware of the great age to which the thorn-tree attains, will not be surprised that such trees should have been selected as landmarks. The age of the hawthorn extends to 100 or 200 years. At Cawder Castle there is one which is said to be coeval with the building, the date of which is 1450 to 1500. There is a thorn-tree at Studley, near Ripon, Yorkshire, 43 feet high; its trunk is 4 feet in diameter, the diameter of its head being 43 feet.

—(Loudon's Arborètum, vol. ii. p. 840.) Old thorn-trees were particularly cherished by our Saxon forefathers, and even in these days, when land is cleared of underwood, immunity is given to thorns and hollies.—(Akerman's Spring Tide.) In the South of Ireland, Mr. Crofton Croker tells us, "Old and solitary thorns are regarded with reverence by the peasantry, and considered as sacred to the revels of the fairy sprites, whose vengeance follows their removal." Piers Plowman tells us in his olden English,—

"And thanne met ich whith a Man on Midlents Soneday as hor as an hawethorne."—(Piers Plowman, p. 314.) Chaucer, in his "Court of Love," makes all his Court to go forth on May-day to fetch the flowers fresh, and branche and bloome, and

"Marke the faire blooming of the hawthorne tree,
"Who finely clothed in a robe of white,
"Fills full the wanton eye with May's delight."
From the Hore Thorn the boundary is similar in both the charters, and it goes from the Hore Thorn to “eccan triewe;” \(^{29}\) and from the eccan triewe to the “Threm Burghen;” \(^{30}\) from the Threm Burghen unto the “Sihtrane” (“Siëren,” or “Shightren”); \(^{31}\) from the Siëren into “Merchebrook;” \(^{32}\) from Merchebrook to “Exleafes burn” \(^{33}\) (or, as in Ælfred’s grant, Exleapes burn); from Exleafes burn to the “Hare (or Hore)

See also in Shakespeare’s King Henry VI. Part 3, Act 2, Sc. 5:

“Gives not the hawthorn bush a sweeter shade
To shepherds looking on their silly sheep
Than doth a rich embroidered canopy
To kings that fear their subjects’ treachery.”

And in Goldsmith’s Deserted Village,—

“The hawthorn bush, with seats beneath the shade
For talking age and whispering lovers made.”

The situation of the “Hore Thorn” may be looked for at the angle formed by the parish boundary, near Stanner’s-hill farm.

\(^{29}\) An oak-tree, probably at Long Cross.

\(^{30}\) The Threm Burghen are undoubtedly the three very remarkable large barrows which are called three bury hills, and are close to the house of Mr. Pocock, a member of the Surrey Archaeological Society. I am not aware if these fine barrows have ever been explored, and if not, I trust the day is not far distant when, with the permission of the owner, they may be opened by the Society; from which, results equal to those from the late Mr. Gage Rokewood’s examination of the Bartlow Hills, in Essex, may be expected.

\(^{31}\) This may mean the Tree of Victory, or merely a hollow tree. “Sige tren” would give us the former signification, and the neighbouring barrows may cover the mighty dead; but “Sihtra,” or “Siohtra,” is a wooden pipe, made of the trunk of a tree, hollowed or bored for the purpose. In a note to the “Monasticon,” it is supposed perhaps to be a tree so called; but I think it must mean the stream which runs by Lyne Grove, and where the boundaries of Chertsey, Thorp, and Egham meet.

\(^{32}\) Mr. Clark informs me there is a Marshbrook near Lyne Grove.

\(^{33}\) Exleafes burn was probably one of the streams forming the Oxley river. Mr. Clark says it was perhaps at Trumps Mill, where there is a stream with a rapid fall.
Mapledure; 34 from the Hore Mapledure to the "thrum treowen;" 35 from the thrum treowen along "Depenbrokes" 36 on right to "Wealagate" 37 (or Wealegate); from Wealagate to "Shirenpol;" 38 from Shirenpol to "Fulbrook;" 39 from Fulbrook to the "Blake WiSig;" 40 and from the Blaken WiSig on right to "Weales hythe;" 41 and along the Thames on the other side "Mixtenham," 42 in the stream between "Burghege" 43 and Mixtenham; and along the water to "Neteleyge;" 44 from the eyot

34 The old maple-tree.
35 The three trees, perhaps on Thorpe Green.
36 A watercourse still called Deepenbrook, separating Thorpe from Egham.
37 "Wealh," A.S. a stranger, foreigner; Welsh, Wealth also signifies a slave or servant, and was applied by the Saxons to such of the British inhabitants as remained on the soil. Wealagate may therefore mean the Strangers', or the British, or Welsh road.
38 This cannot be the large piece of water formerly on Woodham Heath, called Shirewater, or Shirepond; for that is too far back upon the boundary-line to the eastward: the name would lead us to suppose it to have been a piece of water on the border of the county, perhaps the original of the lake now called Virginia Water; but that is on the opposite side of Egham parish. Mr. Clark suggests that a hollow basin-shaped piece of land near Thorpe Leigh, which has some appearance of having formerly been a pool, and where the water is still very deep in flood-time, may mark the site of the Shirenpol.
39 Mr. Clark says he could not hear of Fulbrook in this quarter, but there is a considerable depth of water here, separating Thorpe and Egham.
40 The black willow-tree.
41 See note 38. Mr. Clark says he cannot find that Wealeshithe, or Wallshithe, is known now by that name. It is evidently on the boundary of Thorpe and Egham, at the Thames, and there is at that spot a sort of haven or hithe, and a little island called "Truss's Island."
42 Maxtenham in the old plan of Chertsey Abbey lands, in Manning and Bray's Surrey, and still called Mixenham or Mixnam.
43 Laleham Burway, of which it would be superfluous to say more than to refer to any published account of Chertsey.
44 Mr. Clark informs me that there is an eyot now called Nettle Eyot, in the Thames.
along the Thames abutting on "Oxlake Ford;" \(^{45}\) and along the Thames to "Boresborough;" \(^{46}\) and so forth along the Thames to "Hamenege;" \(^{47}\) and so forth along the stream by "Northenhamenye;" \(^{47}\) and so forth along the Thames, by mid-stream again to "Waiemouth."

The boundaries, as described in the charters of Friðwald and Ælfric, correspond with each other from the Horethorn to Weymouth. But Friðwald's charter goes on to say:—

Thus there are many of the islets which belong to Chertsey and to Thorpe; that is to say, there are eight, more or less, and seven pastures, which are all between Weales Hyth and Weymouth.

[Another landmark we shall find hereafter, that was in Ælfric the wise king's day, to Cherte.] \(^{48}\)

These be the land marks of the fifteen-hide land in Egeham. This beeth the land mark at Egeham; that is, first at the Shigtren above Halsham,\(^{49}\) and so forthright to the threm burghen; \(^{49}\) from the Burghs to Eccantriwe; \(^{49}\) forthright extending to the south end of \(^{45}\) Oxlake is found in the old map of the abbey domain in Manning and Bray's Surrey.

\(^{46}\) Near Chertsey bridge is a piece of land called "Boseyte," which is part of Chertsey parish, and in Surrey, although on the Middlesex side of the river. Mr. Bray mentions it as an instance of the river having, in some places, altered its current. It is shown on the old plan of the abbey lands, in Manning and Bray's Surrey, and is there on the same side of the river as Mixtenham. Boseyte was probably the Boresborough of the charter.

\(^{47}\) There are two islands in the Thames, opposite to Ham (in Chertsey), which are called the Ham eyots, and are doubtless the eyots indicated in the charter as Hameneye and Northenhameneye, one of which is in a bend of the river running north and south, and above stream from the other island, which is in a bend running from west to east.

\(^{48}\) This appears to have been a subsequent interpolation in the copy of the charter.

\(^{49}\) The Shigtren or Siohtren, the Threm Burghen, and the Eccantriwe, are all on the boundary of Chertsey.
Sire Giffrens heath de la Croix;\(^{50}\) from the heath forthright almost to the further end of Herdies,\(^{51}\) and so forth through the “Thorny hill”\(^ {52}\) to Hertleys,\(^ {53}\) nether end of the “Mencehene Rûde”;\(^ {54}\) from the Rûde down right a way on the west side “Poddenhall”\(^ {55}\) almost to “Winebrig’s”;\(^ {56}\) from Winebrig’s westerly to a way that goeth to Winchester,\(^ {57}\) that is called “Shrubbestede;”\(^ {58}\) between the Shrubbes and Winebright; going adown northward under the Park Gate (or road), and so forth from the gate going along by the Park’s hedge\(^ {59}\) to the \(^{50}\) The heath of Sir Geoffrey de la Croix! Sir Geoffrey probably held a knight’s fee in Egham of the abbot. The Norman name of this knight strengthens the opinion that this description of the boundary was made subsequently to the Norman conquest.

\(^{51}\) Herdies or Hardies.

\(^{52}\) The Thorny Hill must have been the south part of Shrubs Hill.

\(^{53}\) Hertleys must have been where Broomhall Hut now is.

\(^{54}\) The Minchin’s Rood, or Nun’s Rood, a cross which probably stood on the hill called “Mincing Ride,” near Broomhall Hut, on Chobham Heath, between an old intrenchment and the high road to Winchester. The name is doubtless derived from its having belonged to the Benedictine Nunnery of Broomhall, in Sunning Hill, Berks, which escheated to the Crown in 13th Henry VIII., and was granted by that monarch, at the instance of Bishop Fisher, to St. John’s College, Cambridge, in the following year. This nunnery is said by Speed and Burton to have been founded by Edward the Black Prince; but this charter shows it to have had a much earlier foundation, if, as it seems reasonable to suppose, the place was called “The Nun’s Rood” as early as the date of this charter, that is, previous to A.D. 675, or even as early as the description of the boundary is supposed to have been written; \(\text{viz.}\), about the reign of Stephen. Mincing Lane, in London, was so called from tenements there, some time pertaining to the Minchins or Nuns of St. Helen’s, in Bishopsgate-street.—Stow’s Survey of London, p. 50.

\(^{55}\) Potnall Warren.

\(^{56}\) Winebridge.

\(^{57}\) The high road to Winchester.

\(^{58}\) Shrubs Hill.

\(^{59}\) The park-gate and the park’s hedge must, I think, have been the gate and fence of the park of Old Windsor, where the Anglo-Saxon kings had a seat until the reign of King Edward the Confessor, who gave it to St. Peter’s, Westminster.
new hedge; from the hedge along the "Frithesbrook" to the "hore æpeldure;" from the hedge æpeldure to the "Knepp;" by the "Quelmes;" from the Quelmes under the "Stonie held," and so going down by "Tigelbeddeburn;" down to that eye that stands in the Thames at "Lodders lake;" and so forth along Thames by midstream to "Glenthuë;" from Glenthuë by midstream along Thames to the Huë (Hythe) before "Negen Stone;" from the Hythe along Thames by midstream down to "Nippenhale;" from Nippen-

60 Frithesbrook I cannot identify. A note in the "Monasticon" says, "A stream where peace was made."

61 The Knepp?

62 The Quelmes signifies the place of execution: this was, I presume, a farm called in old maps Gallows Farm, although not now acknowledged by that name, as I found on inquiry. I also find on the maps Hangmore Hill close by.

63 The Stonie Held was perhaps a sandstone quarry westward of Gallows Farm.

64 Tigelbeddeburn, or Tilebed Burn, must have been a brook which runs down a ravine through the grounds of Cooper's Hill to the Thames, which it enters at the west side of Leatherlake House, being the boundary of the counties of Surrey and Berks.

65 Lodderslake is now called Leatherlake, being an expanse of water in the Thames; and the eye that stands in the Thames at Lodderslake is the far-famed Magna Charta Island, or another eyot a little above it and opposite to Leatherlake House.

66 Glenthythe I have been able to identify most satisfactorily as a creek or inlet from the river to the entrance to Egham racecourse. The place is still called Glanthay.

67 The hythe before Negen Stone must, I think, be Egham Hythe, opposite to Staines. Nigen means nine; and it is very probable that there was a circle of nine stones there before the town of Staines was built, or the corporation of London had any jurisdiction in this part of the river. The name of Staines, in the plural, rather favours this conjecture.

68 Nippenhale—Nippingale in Mr. Kemble's Index to the Codex Diplomaticus. There are some meadows by Savery's Weir much frequented by sportsmen for wild ducks, &c., called by some such name.
hale to "Wheleshuðe;" 69 from Wheleshuð over right to the "Black Wiþege;" 70 from the Wiþege into "Fulbrook;" 70 from Fulbrook into "Sirepol;" 70 from Sirepol into "Whelegate;" 70 from Whelegate over right into "Depenbrok;" 70 from Depenbrok to the threm treowen; 70 from the threm treowen to the hore mapledure; 70 from the hore mapledure to "Exlepesburn;" 70 from the burn into Merchebroke; 70 from the Merchebroke to the Shigtren above Halsham. 70

These be the land marks to "Chabbeham" (Chobham); that is, first, on the Oak Tree; from the Oak Tree along the road to the Hore Thorn; from the Hore Thorn to "Wihsan leage;" 71 from Wihsan leage to "Woburnen;" 72 along the burn to "Wapshete;" 73 from Wapshete to "Mimbrugge;" 74 from Mimbrugge

I have heard it is corrupted into "Nipnose." Abbot Adam (1206 to 1223) assigned the profits of the weir near Nipenhale (Savery’s Weir) towards his Anniversary.—Monasticon, vol. v. p. 423, note; MS. Vitellius, A. xiii.

69 Wheleshythe, which we may recollect was the northern boundary on the Thames, of Thorpe.

70 The Black Withy, Fulbrook, Shirepool, Whelegate, Depenbrook, the Three Trees, the Hore Maple-tree, Exlefsburn, Merchebrook, and the Shigtren, are all on the boundary of Thorpe, as before described.

71 Wihsan Leage, a field of plants, or—the field of the wise men, leaders, or chiefs.

72 Woburnen, in the Bourne Streeme.

73 Mr. Kemble says Wapshot, Surrey. I know not if there be a place so called; but the name reminds us of the family of the same name, who are said to have been settled in this locality before the Norman conquest, and I understand are not yet extinct. Almner’s Barn, which they occupied for so many centuries, is near St. Ann’s Hill, at Chertsey; but they may have come from Chobham, and have taken their name from this place; but if the place were named from them, it proves the very great antiquity of the family in this neighbourhood. Wapshete seems to correspond with the now-called Bonsley’s Farm.

74 Mimbridge is still the name of a bridge on the road to Horsell, and near it is a stone which is one of the boundaries of the parish of Chobham.
to "Wiðless hete;" 75 from Wiðless hete to the hedge at "Mimfeldd;" 76 thence from Mimfelde to the great Withy; from the Withy to "Wuhurst ride;" 77 from the Ride to "Siðwode hagan," 78 and along the hedge to "Fyðeke mere;" 79 from Fytheke mere to "Hasulhurst;" 80 from Hasulhurst right over the field to "Cucesteshagen;" 81 so by the hedge to "Cumore;" 82 from Cumore to the "Standing stone;" 83 from the Standing stone up right to "Ruggestrate," 84 then into "Wyðeke mere;" 85 from Wyðeke mere to "Burschesledæ;" 85 from Burscheslede to "Eggelfusbrugge;" 86 from the bridge to "Cytereneford;" 87 from Cytereneford to 75 Wiðless Heath I cannot identify.

76 Nor Mimfeld; they must both have been on the south side of Chobham.
77 Wuhurst Ride also requires explanation.
78 John de Rutherwyk, abbot (1307 to 1346), planted and inclosed a wood called South Grove in Chobham.—Monasticon, vol. v. p. 424, note ; MS. Vitell.
79 Fytheke Mere seems to correspond in situation with a pond at the bottom of Bisley Green.
80 There is a field called Hasulhurst, on the confines, I believe, of Windlesham and Chobham parishes, not far from the road between Guildford and Bagshot.
81 The Dove’s hedge.
82 There is a place called Cowmoor in Pirbright parish.
83 There is a spot called the Standing Stone, near where the boundaries of Chobham, Pirbright, and Frimley parishes join each other; the stone is now gone, and a bound-mark left in the place.
84 Mr. Clark suggests that Ruggestrate may be Blackstone-lane.
85 Wytheke Mere, Whitmore Pond, or Light Waterpond. Burscheslede may mean an open country with birch-trees.
86 Abbot Adam assigned the profits of a purpesture (probably an inclosure from the common), which Ewlfus de Forda held in Chobham, towards his Anniversary. Probably Ewlfus, or Eggelfus of the Ford, built a bridge instead of the ford.—Monasticon, vol. v. p. 423, note ; MS. Vitell. A. xiii. fo. 81 b.
87 Cytereneford I cannot identify.
"Wipesdone;" 88 from the Done (hill) and along the road to "Hertley;" 89 from Hertley again to the Oak Tree.

The bounds contain four mansas. 90

I have already acknowledged my obligations to the Rev. J. C. Clark, of Chertsey, for kind and valuable information and assistance. I have also to express my thanks to the Rev. S. J. Jerram, of Chobham, for useful information respecting the boundaries of that parish, and to Mr. Thomas R. Bartrop, of Chertsey, and to John Yonge Akerman, Esq., Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries, who accompanied me on a pedestrian excursion to identify some of the boundary-marks, and who has given me his able assistance in rendering the more difficult parts of the Anglo-Saxon charter into modern English.

FRIDUUALD OF SURREY, before 675.

In nomine Domini Salvatoris Ihesu Christi! Hanc donationem ego Friðeuualdus iuris mei ad libertatem uniuscuiusque rei concedo. Quotienscunque aliquo pro opere pietatis membris Christi impendimus, nostræ animæ prodesse credimus, quia sua illi reddimus et nostra non largimur. Qua de re ego Frīðuualdus, prouincie Surrianorum subregulus regis Wlfarii Mercianorum, propria voluntate, sana mente integroque consilio, a presente die dono, concedo, transfero, et de meo iure in tuum transcribo terram ad augendum monasterium quod primo sub rege Egberto constructum est, manentium ducentos ad roborandum idem monasterium quod Cirotsege nuncupatur, et quinque mansas in loco qui dicitur Dorp: non solum terram do, sed confirmo et meipsum et unicum filium meum in obedientiam Erkenuualdi abbatis trado, et est terra inter totum coniuncta manentium trescentorum; et insuper iuxta flumen quod uocatur Damis tota coniuncta simul riparie fluminis usque 88 Wipesdune is, perhaps, Ribbesdown, which forms one of the boundaries of the parish of Chobham, and called in a Perambulation in 1595, Ribpsdown.

89 Hertleys, at Broomhall Hut.
90 Farms.
ad terminum qui dicitur antiqua fossa, id est Fullingadieh; in alia parte iterum eiusdem fluminis ripae usque ad terminum alterius provinciae quae appellatur SUNninges. Est tamen de eadem terra pars semota manentium decem iuxta portum Londonie ubi naues applicant super idem flumen in meridiana parte iuxta uiam publicam. Sunt tamen diversa nomina de ipsa eadem terra supradicta, scilicet Cirotesegi, Dorp, Egcham, Chebecham, Getinges, Muleseg, Wodeham, Huneuualdesham, usque ad terminum supradictum, dono tibi Erkenualdo et ad monasterium construendum, et confirmo, ut tam tu quam posteri tui, pro animae meae remedium intercedere debbatis, cum campis, siluis, pratis, pasuis, et fluminibus, et omnibus aliis rebus ad monasterium sancti Petri, apostolorum principis, de Cerotesegi rite pertinentibus. Omnia igitur in circuita ad predictum monasterium pertinentia quemadmodum a me donata sunt et concessa et confirmata teneatis et possideatis, et quodquem volueritis de eisdem terris facere, tam tu quam posteri tui, liberam licentiam habeatis, nunquam me, ullo tempore, heredeque meo contra hanc donationis meae cartulam esse uenturis. Quod si quis contra hanc donationem meam et confirmationem uenire temptauerit, sit hic separatus ab omni societate Christiana et a caelestis regni participatione priuetur. Et ut hic cartula donationis meee et confirmationis sit firma, stabilis, et inconcussa, testes ut subscripterent rogani quorum nomina infra sunt annexa.

Et ut firma sit hae donationi et confirmationi stabilis, a Wlfario rege Mercianorum confirmata est hæ cartula; nam et super altare posuit manum suam, in uilla quæ vocatur Damu, et manu sua signo sancta crucis subscriptis +. Acta sunt hæ iuxta uillum Friðeuoldi iuxta supradictam fossatam Fullingadieh circa kalendas Marcias.

Dis is òare uluen hida bóc tó Cerotheseg and tó Dorpe, òe Friðeuold king ybelte Criste and seinte Petre and Erkenualde abbude, tó fullen friedôme purg alle ping suá se òe londgimêre hit biecupped òe on ðisser bök iwrite biez. Dys is òe landegemêre tó Cerotheseg and tó Dorpe; òat is, òrest on Waimeâde; òp endlonge Waie tó Waigebrugge; of Waigebrugge innan þe ælde mûledich; midemuerde of ðére dich on ðére ealde herestræt; andlangæ stræt on Wóburnebrugge; andlangæ burne on ðéne grête wiðig; of ðáne grête wiðig endlonge burne in ðáne pôl buve Crocford; of ðes póles hêuede on gerigete to ðáne ellene; of ðáne ellene on gerigete ðe be wertuualen on ðe herestræte; andlangæ stræte to curten stapele; of curten stapele eandlonge stræte to ðáne hûre porne; of ðám porne to Eccan trêune; of Eccan trêume to ðen prem burghen; of ðánum prum beorthen into ðe sihtran; of ðánum siðren into merchebrûke; of merchebrûke on Exlepes burnen; of Exlepes burne to ðéne hûre mapeldure; of ðáne hûre mapeldure to ðen prum treōnuuen; of ðám prem treōnuuen andlangæ dépenbrôkes on gerihte to Wealagate; of Wealagate on shiren pôl; of shiren pôle on fûlan brôc; of fûlen brôke to ðánum blâke wiðig; of ðánum blâken wiðig on gerihte to Weales hûde; andlangæ Temese on ðôere halve Mixtenhammes in ðére eá betweone Burghgeæ and Mixtenham; andlangæ ðes weteres to Netelyge; of ðánum ege andlangæ Temese abûten Oxelake; forð andlangæ Temese to Boresbûrghæ; and suá forð endlangæ Temese to Hámenæge; and suá forð andlangæ strêmes be norder Hámenyge; and suá forð andlangæ Temesæ be hæluen stremes, eft on Waiemûde. Ðús feale synden ðére ygetta ðe ligged ðe into Cherteseye and to ðó Dorpe; ðat synden. viii. leassen and máren, and vii. werberc ðá synden ealle betweenæ Weales hûde and Waiemûde. An ðôere landimêre me shal münde hereafterward ðat was igón albûten bi Ælfredæ ðe wise kinges daie to Cherte. Dis bet ðe landimêre of ðe niftene hide loud in Egeham. Ðis bet ðe landimêre æt Egeham; ðat is, ærest at ðón shigtræn bouen Halsan; and swá forðrígæ to ðe prem burghæn; fram ðes burges to Eccan triwe; forðrígæ strech-chinæ to ðe sôudenæ of sire Giffreus hûde de la croix; fram ðe hêde forðrígæ to herdeies, ourende amâle; and suá forð purg ðére porni hûle to Hertleys under endæ of ðé meechene rude; fram ðe rude dûrmigæ bi ðéne weie an westhalf Poddenhale to Winebrigðæ almost; fram Winebrigðæ westrigæ to ðéne weie ðet geð to Winchester, ðat is ihtonæ Shrubsheshêdedæ; bitwëne ðe shrubbes and Winebrigðæ goinde ðáðun norrigæ binûde ðá parkes gate; and suá forð fram ðe gate goinde bi ðe parkes heige to Herpesford to ðére mulle; fram ðére mulle goinde forð bi ðe parkes heige to ðet niwe hecheche; fram ðe hecheche endlongæ ðes fridës-brûke to ðére hûre æpeldure; fram ðére hûre æpeldure to ðe kneppæ bi ðe quelmes; fram ðe quelmes binûde ðére stonic helde; and suá goinde ðáðun bi tigelbeddeburne ðáðum úpe ðat eigt ðe stant in ðére Temes æt Loddereclake; and suá forð endlangæ Temesæ bi mid strême to Glenthuûde; fram Glenthuûde bi mid strême endlangæ Temesæ to ðáre hûde afornegene stone; fram ðáre hûthe endlongæ Temesæ bi midstrême dúń
CHARTER OF ALFRED OF WESSEX, cir. 890.

† Regnante aeternaliter Rege omnium saeculorum Domino et Salvatore nostro Ihesu Christo! Orbita labenti seculi cotidiano deficit occasu. Hoc quoque indicio fideles quique oppido commonetur, quo bonorum operum exempla perfecte sectantes in patrum benivolentiae proficiendo successu, temporalium uicissitudine bonorum perpetua et incommutabilia regni saeculorum mercantur adipiscie gaudia. Quapropter ego Ælfræ dose, fausente Omnipotentis Dei clementia, Rex Anglorum, ceterarumque provinciarum in circuitu persistentium rector ac gubernator gentium, quandam partem telluris in qua monasterium quod sub nomine Sanctæ Trinitatis et Beati Petri Apostolorum Principis constat honore dedicatum esse, atque fundatum, et constructum, silicet locum qui famoso onomate apud Anglos nuncupatur Ceroteseg, id est Cirotis insula, et v. mansas apud Thorp, cum omnibus appendicis illuc rite pertinentibus; silicet Getinges, Hunuualdesham, et Wudeham, ad sustentationem illius monasterii et omnium illuc unanimitie Deo servientium, libenti animo concedo et confirmo; ut illi ibi degentes pro meis non desistant internunire pecaminibus atque offensionibus meis innumeris. Sit autem supradicta tellus ut taxauimus cum uniuersis quae rite ad se pertinent, uidelicet campis, siluis, pratis, pascauis, stagnis et riuuli, libera et inconcussa, et ab omni seruitutis inugo stabulis, firma, et exinanita. Si quis autem diabolica illectus cupiditate mei decreti diffinitionem et confirmationem irritam fecerit, sciat se in tremendo judicio rationem redditurum, et ultricibus auerni flannis cum anti-christo et eius fautoribus semper arsurum, ibique æternaliter mansurum, nisi in hac uita satis digna penituerit.

Hiis igitur limitibus tellus praefata giratur, etc.

Dis is ſe landimere tó Certeseye and tó Šorpe. Dat is ærest on Waie mıđe; ſuí endlonge Waie tó Waibrugge tó midstrême; of Waibrugge sűuaard tó Boggelsey; of Boggelsey by midstrême to Wudelhám; of Wudelhám suũrihte into Haleuui; bi midstrême; and so fordi bituuenė ſe londe of Haleuui and ſe londe of Wyn-tredeshullë westrîgте; and so fordi westrigte in ſile brok ſe goō bitwene Feeingelaye and ſe uergőe; and so forðirigte tó ſe hoůre stōne; and fram ſe hōre stōne into ſe derne forde; and so fordi westrigte endlonge strême into ſe mōre et Estuoodles ende; and so ſuí betuwene Estuude and Otershaghe on ſe hōre porne; of ſe hōre porne tó eccan treiũue; of eccan treiũue tó ſe prem burghen; of ſe prem burghen into ſe shigtren; of ſe shigtren into merche bróke; of merche bróke on exlœfes burne; of exlœfes burne tó ſe nue hōre mapeldure; of ſe hōre mapeldure tó ſe prem trœüuen; of ſe prem trœüuen endlonge dépe bróke rigt tó wealegatę; of wealegatę on shyre pōl; of shyre pōl rigt tó ſile brók; of ſile brók tó ſe blake witghe; of ſe wiœeghe forðirigte tó weales huũe andlonge Temese an oũere halve mixtenham in ſeũre ſe betuuenė burghegye and mixtenham; enlonge ſe wætere rigt tó neate eyghe; of ſe eyge endlonge Temese ſăũte oxelake; and so forð endlangë Temese tó boresburghë; and so forð endlangë Temese rigt tó hāmen eyge; and suũ forð endlangë strême rigt be norden hāmen eyghe; and suũ forð endlangë Temese be healve strême; eʃt on Wayemuũe.—Codex Diplom. Ævi Saxonicë, op* J. M. Kemble, No. CCCXVIII. tom. ii. and iii. App. p. 401.