

REMARKS ON A BRASS PLATE FORMERLY IN THE CHURCH OF THE HOLY TRINITY AT GUILDFORD, AND NOW REMAINING IN THE HOSPITAL THERE.

By THOS. WM. KING, F.S.A., YORK HERALD.

THE brass plate to the memory of Maurice Abbot remaining in the hospital of the Holy Trinity at Guildford deserves some passing observation. He suffered persecution in the reign of Queen Mary for his steady attachment to the Protestant religion, but subsequently lived in quietude, and reached the good old age of 86 years. The figures of his six sons, of whom at least three became very eminent men, have the peculiarity of being numbered in the consecutive order of birth; it is not pretended to say that they are portraits, but that the third and fourth sons are distinguished by their academic gowns. The former subsequently became Bishop of Salisbury, and the latter Archbishop of Canterbury. The fifth son, Sir Morris<sup>1</sup> Abbot, was eminent as a citizen of London, deeply interested in the affairs of the East Indies, was a representative in Parliament for the city of London in 1626, and Lord Mayor in 1638.

In further illustration of this brass, copies of the funeral certificates of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and of Dame Margaret, the wife of Sir Morris Abbot, from the records of the College of Arms, follow these remarks. A pedigree of the family compiled from the Visitation of Surrey a° 1623, the funeral certificates, and from the wills of the Archbishop, is also annexed.

<sup>1</sup> It is rather remarkable that the Christian name of Sir "Morris" Abbot is thus generally spelled in documents relating to him, while the Christian name of his father and son is spelled "Maurice."

The funeral certificate of Archbishop Abbot sets forth a short account of his funeral at Croydon. It was attended, besides the members of his family, by Laud, Bishop of London, and elect Archbishop of Canterbury; Sir Charles Cæsar, Master of the Rolls; and Sir Henry Martin, Dean of the Arches. Sir Charles Cæsar was constituted Master of the Rolls in 1630, on the death of Sir Dudley Diggs;<sup>1</sup> was knighted in 1613, and died in 1642, and was buried at Benington, co. Herts, where there is a monument to him.<sup>2</sup> Sir Dudley Diggs is mentioned in the Archbishop's will as his "antient pupil in Oxford," to whom he gave a ring set with an orient sapphire, and his antique coins at Lambeth. To Sir Henry Martin, whom he called his "good friend," he bequeathed "all his serpentine cups and vessels," which "when he seeth or useth them, he may think of me." Sir Henry Martin was judge of the High Court of Admiralty, and of the Prerogative Court of the Archbishop of Canterbury. He died 26th Sept., 1641, aged 81, and to whose memory there is a monument in Longworth Church, co. Berks. An account of him may be seen in Wood's "Athenæ Oxon."

In the record of the Archbishop's funeral certificate are emblazoned his arms, Gules a chevron between three pears or (differenced by a mullet) impaled with those of the see of Lichfield and Coventry, and of the sees of London and Canterbury respectively.

The funeral certificate of Dame Margaret Abbot gives an account of her marriage, and of her five sons and five daughters, which, being set forth in the accompanying pedigree, needs no further remark here, except that the funeral certificate corrects an error in the pedigree recorded at the Visitation of 1623, already printed in the Collections of the Society. In that pedigree her children are ascribed to her husband's first wife, Joan Austen, by an inadvertency arising from the rather awkward manner in which the wives of Sir Morris are there given. The arms emblazoned in the funeral certificate are Abbot as before (differenced by a martlet) impaling, azure two lions passant in pale argent for Barnes.

The life of the Archbishop, and the lives of his brothers the Bishop of Salisbury and Sir Morris Abbot, by the Right Hon. Arthur Onslow, Speaker of the House of Commons, were published in 1777. In this work the will of the Archbishop and the statutes of the Hospital at Guildford are copied in extenso.

By the kindness of a friend, copies of some of the wills of the members of this family, and also extracts from the Parish Registers at Guildford, have been supplied, and are inserted hereafter.
