9 The Radiocarbon Determinations

Fig. 9.1 Probability distributions of dates from Downsview: each distribution represents the relative probability that an event occurs at some particular time. Those ‘events’ which are not related to a simple radiocarbon measurement correspond to aspects of the model. For example, ‘start_2262’ is the estimated date of the first dated event from terrace 2262. The large square brackets down the left-hand side along with the OxCal keywords define the overall model exactly.

Fig. 9.2 Probability distributions of GU-5106 and GU-5107 from Mile Oak: each distribution represents the relative probability that an event occurs at some particular time. For each of the radiocarbon dates two distributions have been plotted: one in outline which is the result of simple radiocarbon calibration and a solid one which takes account of the stratigraphic evidence that OxA-5106 must be earlier than OxA-5107.

Fig. 9.3 Probability distributions of dates from Mile Oak: each distribution represents the relative probability that an event occurs at some particular time. For each of the radiocarbon dates two distributions have been plotted, one in outline which is the result of simple radiocarbon calibration and a solid one which is based on the chronological model used. The large square brackets down the left-hand side along with the OxCal keywords define the overall model exactly.

Fig. 9.4 Probability distributions of dates from Redhill: the format is identical to that for Figure 9.1.

Fig. 9.5 Probability distributions of calibrated radiocarbon dates from Sweetpatch Valley Bottom, Toadeshole Bottom East and Toadeshole Bottom West. All the distributions have been calculated according to the usual probability method (Stuiver and Reimer 1993b).
