TATTERSHALL CASTLE

FINDS COLLECTION

1 INTRODUCTION

The Tattershall collection comprises pottery, ceramic building material, glass, metal, clay pipe, plaster and worked stone recovered during William Weir's excavation of the moat between 1912 and 1914. This work was carried out as part of Lord Curzon's restoration of the castle.

Although conserved, the range of material within the collection was unknown. National Trust Archaeologist Rachael Hall recognised the potential of the collection to reveal information about the castle and its past residents. As a result, specialists Dr Anne Boyle, Gary Taylor and Paul Cope-Faulkner of Archaeological Project Services were commissioned to identify and catalogue the finds. The project was managed by Denise Drury. Lavinia Green, Ross Kendall, Sue Unsworth and Dave Hopkins photographed, curated and illustrated the objects. All this information was added to the collection database (designed by Anne Boyle), a printed version of which is presented here.

2 ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Thanks go to Rachel Hall, National Trust Archaeologist for the East Midlands, for commissioning Archaeological Project services to undertake this work and Property Manager Stuart Crow who allowed access to the material.

3. FINDS CATALOGUES

Seven categories of finds were identified during recording. Most of the objects date to the post-medieval period, although earlier pieces are also present. Around 700 objects make up the collection and comprise pottery, ceramic building material, plaster, worked stone, vessel and window glass, metal and clay pipe. Each item in the collection was recorded to the minimum standards recommended by specialist finds groups and was photographed and/or illustrated (unless it was deemed unnecessary to do so).

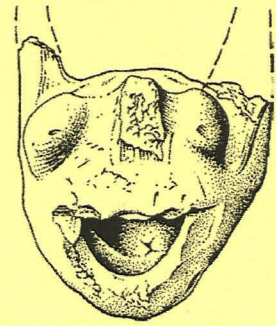

Every item was assigned a unique identification number to aid curation of the assemblage in the future, proceeded by a relevant code letter:

C	Ceramic Building Material
CP	Clay Pipe
G	Glass
M	Metal
P	Pottery
PL	Plaster
S	Stone

In this catalogue, the finds are listed in identification number order and organised within each category of find. The box number indicates an object's physical location in the finds archive, which is held by The National Trust at Tattershall Castle. Some items have been illustrated and/or are suitable for display; this is indicated in the relevant field in the catalogue. Illustrations of the vessels are included in Section 4. Abbreviations and references used in the catalogue are listed in sections 5 and 6.

A few identification numbers are void but these have been left in the sequence.

A separate report on the finds was prepared on behalf of The National Trust by A. Boyle, P. Cope-Faulkner and G. Taylor, Tattershall Castle Finds Collection, Archaeological Project Services, Report no. 57/09.
