SUMMARY

The watching brief was carried out on 15 April by Stuart Farrell for Cameron Archaeology Ltd during the excavation of a trench for the cable for charging point for recharging cars. The charging base and steel box had already been installed by Moray Council prior to this watching brief. The trenches were filled with garden soil and 19th-century finds and the trench is now complete and backfilled.

1 BACKGROUND

- 1.1 The site (Illus 1) is located on the N side of Forres in the car park between Tulloch Park, Caroline St and High St. It is centred on NGR NJ 03760 59031, at 15-20m OD in the parish of Forres.
- 1.2 The work was commissioned by SSE. The excavation of this trench requires a watching brief (Aberdeenshire Council Archaeology Service Caroline Palmer).
- 1.3 All the archaeological work was carried out in the context of Scottish Planning Policy (SPP) Planning Advice Note (PAN 2/2011) and Historic Environment Scotland's Policy Statement (HESPS) which state that archaeological remains should be regarded as part of the environment to be protected and managed.

2 ARCHAEOLOGICAL BACKGROUND

The Historic Environment Record (HER) and Canmore (HES) were consulted online within 1km of the proposed development.

- 2.1 There is one Scheduled Monument within 1km of the proposed cable route. Sueno's Stone (SMR NJ05NW0001) is a Class III Pictish symbol stone. It was found lying flat, and raised to present position after recovery. One of the most magnificent carved stones in Britain, and the tallest and most complex piece of early medieval sculpture in Scotland. It stands over 6.5m high, and weighs c.7.6 tons, of sandstone probably brought from the coast near Covesea. On the west side is a relief carving of a ring-headed cross, the shaft filled with interlace spiral knotwork. Below, two long bearded figures confront each other with smaller attendants behind. The sides are highly decorated, bearing linear art, vine scrolls and beasts. The obverse depicts a great battle scene in four panels which can be interpreted as a heroic narrative reading from top to bottom. The top panel depicts a number of horsemen, possibly a leader and his guard arriving for battle. The central panel is divided into three sections, the top section depicting a scene of battle with the combatants fighting on foot; the middle shows a besieged stronghold, to the left of which a number of headless corpses are depicted which can be interpreted as an account of the fate of the defeated defenders of the besieged stronghold; the bottom section depicts a group of horsemen fleeing from a group of infantry. The lower two panels of the E face appears to show the final defeat of the defending army, one depicting piles of headless corpses and severed heads, and the other panel shows the dispersal of the defeated army. Badly weathered, the stone is now housed under a specially constructed glass canopy. Excavations in 1926 established that the stone was not counterbalanced by a deeply buried footing but set into a larger base stone. Resistivity and magnetometer survey immediately around the monument in 1978 did not identify any archaeological features, nor did evaluation in the adjacent field to the W in 1989 (NJ05NW0339). A programme of archaeological investigation (excavation and watching briefs) was carried out in 1990-1991 before and during construction of the protective glass canopy that now encloses the stone. The work re-exposed the lowermost panel of carving on the E face and the massive socketed block that forms the socle for the monument. Two adjacent oval settings, dated to the first millennium BC, may relate to emplacement of the stone at its present location, and raises doubts about the long standing tradition that the present location of the stone dates from the 18th century. These excavations did not identify any particular features which were the cause of anomalies recorded by geophysical survey that was carried out in 1990 over an area around the stone considered for landscaping. In 1995 AOC conducted the total excavation of area affected by proposed bus turning hammerhead. The subsoil surface was hand cleaned. Four features were identified within the subsoil surface, two of which were modern in origin and one, a gully, was only tentatively identified as anthropogenic in origin. The fourth feature was a truncated pit that contained a quantity of burnt wood charcoal. Alba Archaeology carried out a watching brief adjacent to Sueno's Stone in Forres in February 2005. A single trench was excavated by machine in preparation for a cycle path. Nine archaeological features were found at a depth of approximately 0.8m below the ground surface. No significant finds were uncovered but a single radiocarbon date of approximately 100 BC suggests an Iron Age provenience for the features perhaps associated with settlement in the area. No features that could be securely related to the stone itself were uncovered. A watching brief was maintained by Kirkdale Archaeology in July 2015 during the excavation of two trenches to house the concrete foundations for a bench to be installed to the southwest of the stone, but this disturbed only modern landscaping (AOC 1996, 76; Armit, 1998, 144-5; Breeze 2002, 20-21; Brogden 2012, 1; Buchanan, 2005, 94; Farrell 2003, 96; McCullagh 1991, 38; McCullagh 1990, 21; McCullagh 1995; Sellar 1993; Shepherd and Ralston 1979, 122-123; Shepherd 1986, 122-123).

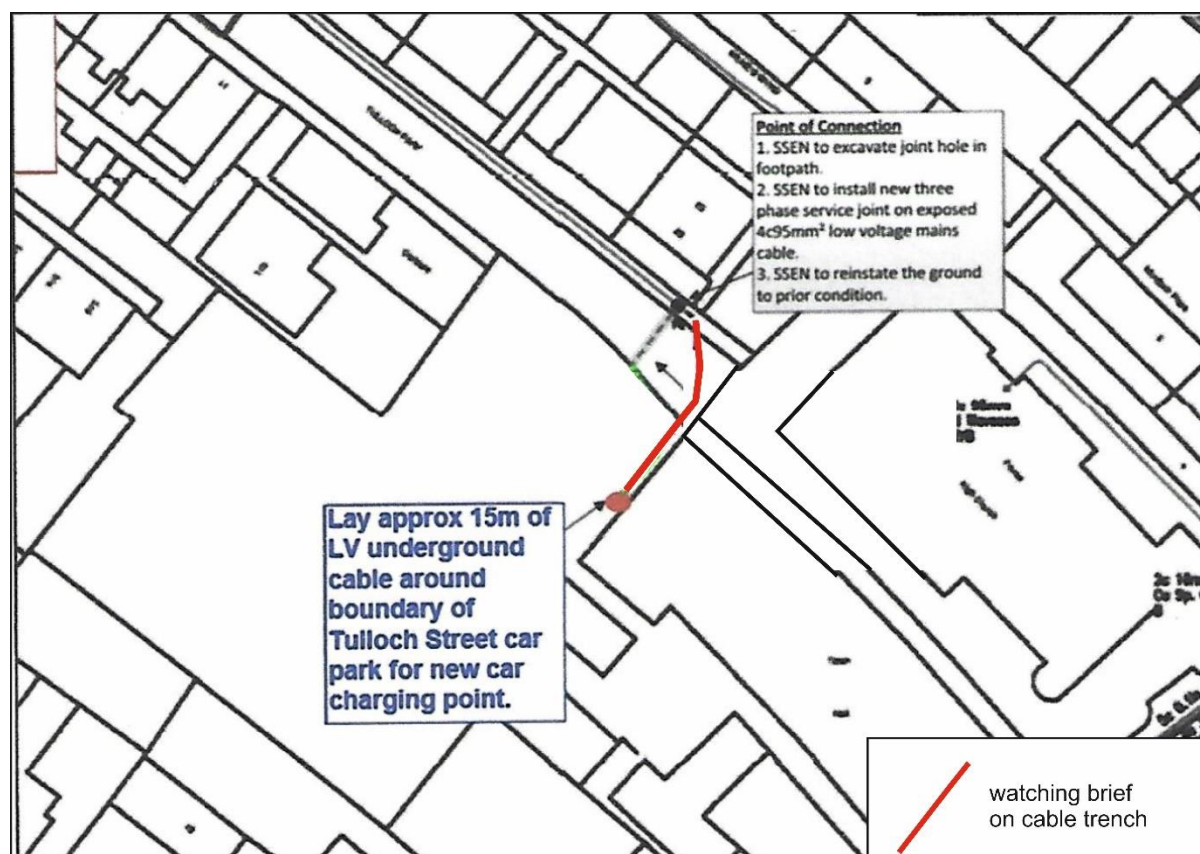

- 2.2 A fragment of a Class I Pictish symbol stone (SMR NJ05NW0073) was found in 1992 built into a garden wall at Rosebank, St. Leonard's Road, Forres (NJ05NW0343). The stone shows part of a crescent and V-rod. It is now in the Falconer Museum in Forres.
- 2.3 Burgh of Forres (SMR NJ05NW0348) was granted by Robert I to Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray in 1312 and forfeited to the Crown in 1455. Forres still displays much of the medieval layout, with long narrow plots running at right angles to the High Street, also referred to as the 'kin's calsay' (causeway). In the original burgh layout the burgh plots are roughly eighteen and a half feet wide. There is some evidence for an east port (gateway) at the point of entry to the High Street (about the location of the present Masonic Hall) and which was still standing in 1769. A north port may have stood at the foot of Kirk Vennel (Gordon Street), a west port would have been located at the start of the High Street to control the crossing of the Mosset Burn, and a further port could have been located at the foot of Tolbooth Wynd, but the locations of these are only conjectural. In 1390 Forres was destroyed by fire in an attack by the 'Wolf of Badenoch' (Alexander Stewart, Earl of Buchan). In 1496 King James IV granted a confirming charter setting out the rights, privileges and duties of the burghers.
- 2.4 A watching brief was carried out in this and two other areas alongside the Burn of Mosset in 2005 by S. Farrell during investigative works for the Moray Flood Alleviation Scheme (MFAS) (SMR NJ05NW0135). In the area around Mosset Tavern, a 19th century lade and 19th century pottery fragments were recorded as well as a possible 18th century cobbled surface. In the Strathcona Road area, another 19th century lade and more 19th century pottery were recorded in addition to a concrete floor dating to the 1920s/30s belonging to a farm which once stood at the site, and large pieces of worked sandstone, again probably from the farm. No further features of archaeological significance were noted. Another archaeological evaluation was carried out by Headland Archaeology in 2006 on the area between Mosset Burn and Old Mint Road. Six trenches were excavated, revealing cobbles and building debris representing the remains of buildings noted on 19th and 20th century maps (Farrell 2006, 94).
- 2.5 A medallion of compound substance, chocolate-coloured, bearing figures in Roman dress and latin inscriptions (SMR NJ05NW0024) was found in Forres.
- 2.6 Forres is the site of a royal castle (SMR NJ05NW0017) which stood at west end of High street in Forres, and is now surmounted by a 19th Century memorial obelisk stands on the site. The castle was repeatedly destroyed and rebuilt throughout its history, with the earliest alleged destruction in AD850 by Norsemen. King David II was in residence in 1367. By the 14th Century, the castle had been greatly strengthened by the addition of thick walls and keep with flanking towers. It was held by the Dunbars of Westfield until the 17th Century, when it was thought to have fallen into decay. In 1712 Provost Dawson commenced a house on top of site but did not complete its construction.
- 2.7 Bronze coin of Honorius c23 AD, found in 1947 (SMR NJ05NW0018) was found in Forres. Also a Roman coin was dug up in garden in 1984 (SMR NJ05NW0051). The finder showed it to the curator of Forres museum but refused permission for it to be examined or photographed. It is unknown what type of coin it is.
- 2.8 A roughly diamond-shaped flint knife was found near Caroline Street in Forres (SMR NJ05NW0022). Find circumstances are unknown.
- 2.9 On the First Edition OS map the are is within the grounds of Tulloch House adjacent to outbuildings and by the Second Edition OS map it is in the ground of [Mechanics] 'Institute'. The site is within the Forres Conservation Area

3 THE WATCHING BRIEF

The watching brief was carried out on 15 April by Stuart Farrell for Cameron Archaeology Ltd during the excavation of a trench for the cable for charging point for recharging cars (Illus 2). The charging base and steel box had already been installed by Moray Council prior to this watching brief. The site is an existing tarred car park. The route of trench in area of carpark was monitored. The footpath was partially monitored as it was heavily disturbed by existing gas, electric and street lighting cables.

The trench was 0.65m deep, 0.3m wide and 26m in length. Starting from E end tarmac to a depth of 8cm over a grave sub-base to a depth of 18cm over a dirty mixed soil with a natural of orange sand at 0.4m. It was filled with dirty mixed soil contains fragments of brick. At the end of the path (the lane between St Leonard's Church and Town Hall) dark topsoil at depth of 0.5m – water pipe (concrete asbestos coated) revealed to centre of lane running NNW-SSE. Dark black brown 'garden' soil containing fragments of 19th C bottle glass, coal, blue & white china, firebrick, slate with inclusions of rounded gravel sand at 0.65m.

The trench to the rear of Town Hall was excavated SW-NE 0.7m off the edge of building. The fills consisted of tarmac over mixed gravels varying in depth from 0.4m to 0.2m which were dark brown-black soil to depth of 0.65m with fragments of clay pantile, tin-glazed pottery and firebrick, blue & white china, animal bone, 19th-century red earthenwares.

4 CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

No features or deposits of interest revealed, only 19th-century material was found and the trench is now complete.
