

INVENTORIES OF THE GOODS OF HENRY OF EASTRY
(1331), RICHARD OF OXENDEN (1334), AND ROBERT
HATHBRAND (1339), SUCCESSIVELY PRIORS OF THE MONASTERY OF CHRISTCHURCH, CANTERBURY.

Transcribed and annotated by W. H. ST. JOHN HOPE, M.A.

The interesting series of inventories and accompanying memoranda that forms the subject of this paper is contained in a narrow paper book of sixteen leaves, each measuring $16\frac{1}{2}$ by 6 inches, which forms part of the manuscript numbered E. 27 in the Chapter Library at Canterbury. It is written throughout by the same scribe, and its contents have therefore no doubt been copied into the book from the original documents (which are now lost) for preservation and reference.

Since a monk, even if prior, had in theory no private property these inventories do not enumerate the goods of the priors themselves, but are lists of such plate and other valuables belonging to the monastery as were lent to the prior for use during his lifetime. Such lists often took the form of an indenture and on the death of the holder were checked over and note made of any additions or defects. Cases in point will be found in the documents before us.

The first list is an "inventory of all the goods of Henry, prior of Christchurch, Canterbury, on the day of the election of prior Richard, viz. on the 26th day of April A.D. 1331, after the death of the said Dan Henry the prior his predecessor of good memory."

It enumerates the books, the vestments, mitres and other ornaments of the prior and his chapel, the silver plate, the hangings and carpets and other furniture of his lodging, the pewter and copper vessels, and the various utensils and instruments of domestic use, and the horses in his stable.

The actual contents of each chamber in the prior's lodging are not specified, perhaps because they were reckoned as fixtures which passed as a matter of course from one prior to another. Mention is however made of the camera or chambers in general, the privy chamber (privata camera), the hall (aula), the greater and lesser chapels (magna capella or capella major, and capella minor), of the wardrobe (garderoba), and of the kitchen (coquina) and buttery (botelria).

The prior Henry referred to was the famous Henry of Eastry. He entered the monastery as a novice and after, no doubt, filling various offices was elected prior in April 1285. He died on 8th April, 1331 at the advanced age, it is said, of 92, after being prior for forty-six years. During his priorate he ruled the monastery well and prudently, and succeeded in paying off a debt of 3000 marks with which the convent was burdened. He was also an energetic builder, and both in the church and monastery he left behind him evidences of his artistic taste and munificence.

According to a manuscript list of the archbishops and priors compiled in archbishop Warham's time Henry of Eastry was buried in the church inter imagines sanctarum virginum Sythe et Apollonie.¹

This burial place has hitherto been unknown and unidentified, but there can be little if any doubt that prior Henry's tomb is that in the south aisle of the quire which has until now been called the monument of archbishop Walter Reynolds, who died in 1327. The recumbent effigy upon it is not that of an archbishop, but of a mitred prior in mass vestments without staff or crosier. The tomb is flanked by two large niches, now empty, which we may reasonably suppose held the images of St. Syth and St. Apollonia. Between the flanking tabernacles once rose a handsome canopy, but this has long been taken away. In the Treasurers' Accounts for 1330–31 is an entry:

Pro tumba domini H. prioris xxij.li. iijs. iiijd.

which no doubt refers to the monument under notice.

Both Dart² and Professor Willis³ have printed the long list which has been preserved⁴ of the Nova opera in Ecclesia et in Curia tempore H. Prioris, the total cost of which was £2184 18s. 8d.; it need not therefore be here repeated. There are, however, in the list certain entries relating to the buildings occupied by the prior himself which may properly be noticed.

The prior's camera or lodging at Christchurch, Canterbury, consisted of an extensive group of chambers, between the great dormitory and the infirmary, over two sides, the east and south, of the infirmary cloister. This cloister, like all the principal divisions of the monastery, is of Norman origin, and part of its beautiful twelfth century arcade still remains on the east side. The south alley was rebuilt on an enlarged scale about 1250 as the subvault of the prior's chapel above. In the well-known Norman drawing a building lettered Camera prioris vetus is shewn at the north-east corner of the infirmary cloister, where part of it remains. The prior's chapel was being built in 1254,¹ and was finished by prior Roger (1258–1263).² It was 64 feet long and 21 feet wide, but was unfortunately pulled down about 1700. Its place is now occupied by the Howley Library. The prior's chapel was no doubt connected with the camera vetus by other chambers over the eastern alley of the cloister, but all these were rebuilt or enlarged by Henry of Eastry soon after his election as prior. The extent of his works is thus enumerated in the list above-mentioned:

Ab anno Domini. M ^o .	Camera magna Prioris cum pictura.
CC ^o lxxxv ^o usque ad	Camera minor cum Capella ³ et novo Camino.
annum Nonagesimum	Camera longa cum novo camino.
	Camera ad scaccarium cum diversorio ibidem.
	Studium Prioris.
Anno. M.CC.XC.j ^o	Nova Camera Prioris plumbata. cum Garderoba. Camino. Celatura. pictura. et pavimento aliarum Camerarum . xxxvj.li. xvij.s vj.d.
Anno. M.CC.XC.iiij ^o	Nova panetria et nova coquina plumbata in Camera Prioris .xiiij.li. xviii.s. ⁴

The buildings here specified formed part of the group round the camera prioris vetus, which contained the prior's own lodging and offices, and accommodation for his servants, and the inventory refers to the contents of these chambers. But there is shewn in the Norman drawing, on the north side of the infirmary chapel, a building lettered Nova Camera Prioris. This was gradually enlarged in later times and eventually became an extensive establishment or mansion for the reception of the more distinguished guests of the monastery, who were assigned to the prior. Its history, however, does not now concern us, but its existence is here noted to avoid confusion with the camera vetus where the prior lived.

² "Capellam inter Dormitorium et Infirmarym honorifice perfecit." Henry Wharton, Anglia Sacra, i. 140.

Of Richard of Oxenden, who was elected prior 26th April 1331 in succession to Henry of Eastry, very little is known. He died 4th August 1338 and was buried in the chapel of St. Michael (on the east side of the south transept). The inventory made during his priorate, in 1334, contains a list of the plate assigned to his use and of the furniture in his lodging. This is in part a repetition of the inventory of 1331, but it gives fuller details and contains as well as a number of additional items.

Robert Hathbrand was elected prior in succession to Richard of Oxenden, and held office for thirty-two years, dying on 16th July (xvii Kal. Aug.) 1370. He was buried in St. Michael's chapel. Among the buildings ascribed to him in the Kalendar of Obits is Cameram aliam plumbo coopertam. juxta la gloriet.¹ This new chamber was an addition to the prior's lodging, the Gloriet being the upper chamber at the north end of it.

The inventory made during Robert Hathbrand's term of office is a very short one, drawn up in 1339, the year after his election. It is confined almost entirely to bed furniture, carpets, hangings, etc. all of which are enumerated in the preceding inventory, though not always in identical terms.

The inventory of 1331 has a number of marginal annotations of later date which record the disposal or whereabouts of various articles. The inventory of 1334 has similar additions, but fewer in number. All have been duly noted in my transcript.
