SELBY ABBEY CHURCH OF ENGLAND PRIMARY SCHOOL

SELBY, NORTH YORKSHIRE

PHOTOGRAPHIC BUILDING SURVEY

Summary

As part of the planning process for the refurbishment and expansion of Selby Abbey Church of England Primary School a systematic photographic survey was undertaken of the school complex (Planning Ref. NY/2013/0075/FUL). The survey was undertaken to provide a visual record of the building as it existed before any alterations. The school lies near the centre of Selby 250m to the south-west of the abbey in Selby civil parish in Selby District (NGR SE 61380 32189).

It was not possible to complete a total photographic record of all aspects of all of the buildings due to both the presence of the pre-school club in part of one of the buildings and the small size of many of the rooms. The small size of some of the rooms prevented any meaningful images being taken. Overall the record made showed that much of the original and many of the early features of the interior of the school had been removed over the intervening 150 years since the schools original construction. Those features that survived included some window and door frames, cast iron radiators, wooden cupboards, and timber panelling.

PHOTOGRAPHIC BUILDING SURVEY

1.0 INTRODUCTION

- 1.1 This report presents the results of a photographic survey on Selby Abbey Church of England Primary School, Selby, North Yorkshire. The survey was undertaken in order to fulfil one of the planning conditions which was to provide mitigation in the form of a visual record of the building, to a previously agreed written scheme of investigation, as it existed before any alterations were made (Planning Ref. NY/2013/0075/FUL). The school lies on the eastern side of New Lane near the centre of Selby and c.250m to the south-west of the abbey. The site is in Selby civil parish of Selby District (NGR SE 61380 32189) (Figures 1 & 2).
- 1.2 The survey was undertaken by JB Archaeological Services (JBAS) on behalf of Jacobs on the 22nd July 2013.

2.0 BACKGROUND

Historic Background

- 2.1 The earliest known activity in Selby dates from the Roman period though its extent and nature is still being researched. Post-Roman and early medieval activity has been attested to since the late 19th century (Jacobs, 2013, 10). The place name for Selby is first recorded in c.1030 as Seleby and then as Salebi in the Domesday Book of 1086. The name is derived from the Old English sele or Old Scandinavian selja meaning 'farmstead or village near (a copse of) sallow-trees' (Mills, 1998, 305), with the abbey being established in the 1060/70s. From then onwards the town and abbey steadily develop as a centre of regional importance. For fuller details of the history of Selby see Jacobs, 2013.
- 2.2 Selby Abbey School was established as part of the National School Movement in 1857 on a grant of a parcel of land from Lord Londesborough on the eastern side of New Lane. The school opened in January the following year, providing places for 350 boys, girls and infants, and separate houses for the school master and school mistress, all designed in the Tudor style. The layout of the original National School is shown on the 1891 Ordnance Survey Town Plan of Selby which shows the T-shaped school building, flanked by projecting schoolhouses to the northeast and southeast, surrounded by playgrounds with a dividing wall to segregate male and female pupils (Jacobs, 2013, 12).

2.3 The school then developed over the first part of the 20th century which resulted in the construction of the infant school in 1927 and a further set of classrooms along the New Lane frontage being built in 1933-4. For fuller details of the development of the school see Jacobs, 2013.

Topography and Land-use

2.4 The school lies at a height of c.5 mOD in an area of level ground. The site is surrounded by a mixture of retail and residential buildings.

3.0 AIMS AND OBJECTIVES

- 3.1 The objective of the photographic recording was to compile a photographic record of the building. The specific aims were to:
 - Record the condition of the building at the current point in time and to
 - Record any historic features that may survive.

4.0 METHODOLOGY

- 4.1 The photographic recording was undertaken using a 35mm analogue Single Lens Reflex camera with black and white print film (Ilford XP2 ASA400) and colour digital photography at 14 megapixel resolution.
- 4.2 The recording consisted of general views of the school buildings and their setting along with its external appearance (both at right angles and obliquely). A record of the overall appearance of the interior of the school building and individual rooms was also made along with detail of any relevant structural or decorative detail.

5.0 RESULTS

5.1 Overall it was possible to create a thorough record of the various school buildings showing the current condition and usage. There was an exception in two areas where recording was not permitted (shown on Figure 2). The first of these was due to the presence of the pre-school group in the eastern end of the Infants School. This group was in the premises everyday so access would not be possible during any weekday. It was also pointed out by the school staff that that part of the school was to be unaffected by the refurbishment works. The second area was the room at the north-western end of the Infants School were a meeting was being held all day on the day of the survey. In addition to this due to the failure of the flash gun for the black and white camera the poorly light downstairs of the School Masters and Mistresses Houses was only recorded by digital photography.

5.2 The recording showed that although the majority of the external appearance of the buildings appeared to be much as it was when the various phases were built (Plate 1) the internal fixtures and fittings had been largely lost over time (Plate 2). This loss of detail is due to various improvements made to the school over time such as the installation of electric lighting through to modern computer networks.

Plate 2. Interior of classroom in South Range with only modern features, looking ESE

5.3 The National School is a brick built, single story structure with sandstone detailing around the doors and windows under a grey slate roof. The original building consisted of three ranges (North, South and West) along with the two storey School Masters and Mistresses Houses in the Tudor style. See Jacobs, 2013 for full details of the schools history, construction dates and stylistic details. The former School Masters house (Plates 1 & 3) is currently in use as an administration block (Plate 4).

Plate 3. School Masters House, looking north-east

The School Masters House (Figure 7)

- 5.4 The larger size of the School Masters House can be seen to reflect the hierarchy between the male and female teachers. Externally the eastern elevation can be seen to retain evidence for two blocked window openings which now correspond with the staff toilets. Apart from this the external appearance of the building is large unaltered (Plate 6).
- As already mentioned above the internal details of the building have largely been lost to the various refurbishments carried out over the last 150 years (Plate 4). The following original/early details surviving were noted:

- Moulded cornice in the most southerly of the rooms in the School
 - Some wooden windows and moulded architrave

Plate 5. Blocked openings on the eastern elevation of the School Masters House

Plate 6. School Masters House, looking north-west

The School Mistresses House (Figure 5)

- 5.6 Of all the buildings in the complex the former School Mistresses House retained the most original or early features and fittings (Plate 7). Within the house all of the original or early internal doors and moulded architraves including the main bedroom cupboard door (Plate 8) survived with locks (Plate 9) and one coat hook in the main bedroom (Plate 10) which may be original. The majority of the windows appear to date from a later refurbishment (Plate 11) but the one in the dining room could be original (Plate 12).
- 5.7 The other sole surviving original feature was the wooden banisters with diamond shaped spindles and turned newel posts (Plate 14). Evidence for the construction of the banisters can be seen in a small rectangular copper alloy plate used to connect the sections of hand rail (Plates 15). None of the fireplaces survived and externally the boot scraper was in a very poor condition.

Main School Building (Figures 4 & 5)

- 5.8 Apart from the widespread replacement of windows with modern uPVC double glazed units the majority of the exterior of the main building remains largely unchanged (Plates 16-18). Although the original wooden windows have largely been replaced there were only two openings which had lost their original configuration of stone transoms. An example of one of these can be seen in the eastern elevation (Plate 17). Internally the historic layout of the National School remains visible, despite later subdivision and alteration. The school rooms for girls, boys and infants were located to the west, south and north respectively and were each originally formed by a single large space, which may have been divided with curtains when required. The current classroom layout dates largely from the later 19th century when timber and glass partitions were inserted to create smaller classrooms, some of which survive today. Survival of historic fixtures and fittings within the school is limited to original sash and casement windows, memorial stones of late 19th century date, timber-glazed classroom partitions and a door with gothic hinges in the north range (Jacobs, 2013, 17).
- 5.9 Internally as with the School Masters House successive refurbishments have removed most of the original features. A later 19th century feature which has survived are the glazing panels between the South Range and the West Range (Plate 19) and the South Range and the Staff Room. The surviving radiators in this section appear to be from a refurbishment of the early 20th century.

1897 Harper Memorial (Figure 5)

5.10 Within this single large room the only feature of interest was the commemoration plaque for the establishing of the school (Plate 21), all other features appear to have been replaced over time. In addition there are a number of blocked mullion windows (Honeywell, 2013, pers comm).

1890-1900 Additions (Figure 4)

5.11 As with the other parts of the school these two modest additions remain largely unchanged externally but internally of wholly modern character. The small building to the north of the main school (Plate 22) is used as a boiler room whilst the addition to the east is a kitchen storeroom (Plate 23).

Plate 22. Northern addition to main building, looking south-west

Plate 23. Eastern addition to main building, looking west

1933-4 Senior Classroom Extension (Figure 6)

5.12 The school building was extended again in 1933-1934 with the construction of a new range of classrooms for senior pupils (Plate 24). This range is located in front of the Harper Memorial classroom and now forms the elevation to New Lane. This is a single-storey red brick range, with a central corridor flanked by classrooms to either side which are illuminated by large windows along the external elevations. As with the other buildings the majority of the windows are modern replacements (Plate 24) and most internal features have been lost. Those features which survived were the classroom doors, wooden tongue and groove panelling below the waist level and built in wooden cupboards (Plates 25 & 26), though the cupboard doors have been lost.

Plate 25. Interior of classroom on eastern side of block, showing surviving wooden panelling, door and remains of built in cupboards

1927 Infants School (Figure 7)

The Selby Abbey Infant School was opened in 1927 to provide additional onsite 5.13 accommodation for the school's infant department. This is a single-storey red brick building with slate roof, with tall segmental-headed windows lining the south, east and west elevations, all of which contain modern uPVC fittings. In plan, the building is formed by a central hall flanked by corridors to the east, west and south, with classrooms arranged around the outside of the corridors, all of which are separately roofed. A small separately roofed block with a substantial tall chimney stack is located to the northwest of the hall which is likely to have originally held the offices for the Infant School. Internally, the hall retains cornicing and a picture rail and some classrooms retain part-glazed doors; however overall little remains of original fixtures and fittings (Jacobs, 2013, 19 et seq). Externally it could be seen that the nature of this block was the same as the main school building. That is externally little changed from its construction apart from the replacement of the windows (Plate 27) but internally almost devoid of original features (Plate 28) and many of the class rooms have had dividing walls removed to create larger internal spaces.

Plate 27. Southern elevation of the Infant School, looking north-east

5.14 A few original features do survive and include elements of internal glazing (Plate 29) which would allow light into the hallway and ventilation in to the inner rooms. Some cast iron radiators (Plate 30) and the moulded cornice around the top of the main hall (Plate 31).

Plate 28. Typical classroom in the Infant School

Plate 29. Internal glazing at eastern end of building

Plate 30. Original cast iron radiator, looking south

Plate 31. Moulded cornice in main hall

Setting (Figure 8)

5.15 The school lies within Selby Town Conservation Area which is composed of a mixture of historic (Plates 32 & 33) and modern buildings (Plate 34). The surviving historic buildings are concentrated on the western side of the school and as a group provide a good example of the 19th century streetscape. However, the area to the south and east of the school has seen much re-development and is mainly composed of modern retail or service outlets.

6.0 DISCUSSION and CONCLUSION

As can be seen from the results of the recording described above the external appearance of the various school buildings are largely unchanged with the most significant alteration being the widespread replacement of the windows. However, internally most of the original fixtures and fittings appear to have been lost over time and only a few radiators, internal glazing and various mouldings surviving to show earlier configurations. The one exception to this is the School Mistresses House where apart from the fireplaces most of the internal detail survives in a good condition.
