PLATES

- 1 (a) The Peacock Inn from the north: Bays 2 and 3. Steep pitch of roof and cove under eaves indicate the survival of a timber-framed building behind the later façade.
- 1 (b) The Peacock Inn from the south: 19th century wing, outbuildings and rear of Bay 2.
- 2 (a) Bay 3 excavation: Period IIa hearth (F94) with later floor levels visible in sections. North is to the left.
- 2 (b) Period III stone walls: F27 (left, west), and F14 (top, north).
- 3 (a) The Peacock Inn: Bay 3, first floor, looking north-west. Some original stone infill survives between studs. Inserted second floor rests on tie-beams of Trusses III and IV.
- 3 (b) The Peacock Inn: Bay 3, first floor, north wall from the interior showing studs and coving brackets, both grooved for infill.
- 4 (a) The Peacock Inn: north roof slope looking west. East face of Truss III with recently-raised collar. The new roof has been constructed outside the original rafters. Floor, chimney, dormer and horizontal timbers for attic ceiling are all inserted.
- 4 (b) The Peacock Inn: CVII excavation F545, stone-lined cess pit (Period III). North is at the top of the photograph.
