

CONTENTS

IRON AGE AND ROMAN SETTLEMENT AT BOULTON MOOR, EAST OF CHELLASTON LANE, DERBY Tim Allen and Gary Evans	1
RE-FRAMING REPTON: NEW INSIGHT INTO SETTLEMENT, LANDSCAPE AND SOCIAL CHANGE AT THE EARLY MEDIEVAL AND VIKING-AGE SITE Gareth Davies	4
THE SEARCH FOR THE EARLY MEDIEVAL BURGH OF DERBY Chris Wardle	22
CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF LATE MEDIEVAL POTTERY FROM TICKNALL AND CALKE ABBEY Richard Jones	45
THE ORIGINS OF SOUTH DERBYSHIRE Andrew Corcoran	53
SIR WILLIAM CAVENDISH, MARRIAGE TO BESS AND RELOCATION TO DERBYSHIRE Terry Kilburn	85
THE CHINLEY NEIGHBOURSHIPS AND SLATE BREAKS Derek Brumhead	99
INDEX	123

ILLUSTRATIONS

IRON AGE AND ROMAN SETTLEMENT AT BOULTON MOOR, EAST OF CHELLASTON LANE, DERBY

Fig. 1	Site Location	1
Fig. 2	Iron Age vessel from which carbonised residue gave a date of 175-40 cal BC at 95% confidence	2

RE-FRAMING REPTON: NEW INSIGHT INTO SETTLEMENT, LANDSCAPE AND SOCIAL CHANGE AT THE EARLY MEDIEVAL AND VIKING-AGE SITE

Fig. 1	Lidar image of Repton showing locations of key areas mentioned in the article, including recent archaeological investigations	8
Fig. 2	Excavated features at the Science Building site	9
Fig. 3	Location Plan and Representative Section of the Sports Facilities Palaeochannel	14
Plate 1	The Repton School Science Building site under excavation, from the west looking east of St. Wystan's	11
Plate 2	The Repton Sports facilities site before demolition with the Science Building site on top of the sandstone bluff looking east towards St. Wystan's.	15

THE SEARCH FOR THE EARLY MEDIEVAL BURGH OF DERBY

Fig. 1	The locations of archaeological projects in the centre of Derby	29
--------	---	----

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS OF LATE MEDIEVAL POTTERY FROM TICKNALL AND CALKE ABBEY

Fig. 1a	PC plot of A1-normalised data for Ticknall	49
Fig. 1b	PC plot of A1-normalised data for same samples as in Fig. 1a but with additions of T#1 and T#2	50
Fig. 2a, b	PC plots of the compositions with (a) sample numbers and (b) colour coded	51
Table 1	Pottery from Ticknall and Calke Abbey, Derbyshire	46
Table 2a	Chemical compositions of pottery from Ticknall and Calke Abbey	47
Table 2b	Alan Vince's ICP-MS data used in this study	48

THE ORIGINS OF SOUTH DERBYSHIRE

Fig. 1	Modern Borders of South Derbyshire	54
Fig. 2	Borders of Repton and Gresley Hundred Prior to 1895	55
Fig. 3	Late Medieval South Derbyshire	57
Fig. 4	Matrix of Estate and Parish Structures, Repton Hundred c. AD 1066	61
Fig. 5	Matrix of estate and Parish Structures, Drakelow Hundred c. AD 1066	62
Fig. 6	The AD 942 Drakelow / Gresley Hundred	64
Fig. 7	Leicestershire in blue, with Danish-influenced names	66
Fig. 8	The Repton Stone	69
Fig. 9	Hrepingas Reconstruction	72
Fig. 10	The Radial Pattern at Appleby and No Man's Heath	74
Fig. 11	The River and Road Settlements	76
Plate 1	The Repton Cross. Today's round shaft and ancient plinths, in a late 19th century photo	68

THE CHINLEY NEIGHBOURSHIPS AND SLATE BREAKS

Fig. 1	North-west Derbyshire as shown on Burdett's map of 1767, reprinted with minor amendments in 1791. The approximate area of the Chinley herbage is shown by a dotted red line	99
Fig. 2	Cracken Edge as shown on the Ordnance Survey 6inch map	105
Fig. 3	Mr Fox's 1783 survey of the slate breaks and their owners	111
Fig. 4	Receipt for surveying the slate breaks by Mr L. Fox in the possession of Mr George Needham of Chinley	113
Table 1	'The names of all the neighbourships which belong unto Chinley and what part everyone hath purchased'	103-4
Table 2	The 1628 allocation of neighbourships and parcels on land under the first division	106
Table 3	The 1628 allocation of neighbourships in the second division	107
Table 4	The 1628 allocation of neighbourships and slate breaks in the third (residue) division	108
Table 5	Mr Fox's list of the owners of the slate breaks in 1783	112
Table 6	Deeds in the Derbyshire record Office: The Bagshaw Collection (Bag C)	114