Table 20 Impressions of plant material on Anglo-Saxon cremation urns identifications.

In order to ensure that urns from the entire area were represented 10 were selected from each 100 numbers, representing all types and fabrics.

The numbers examined were as follows:

9. The Analysis of Organic Residues in Pot Sherds with Pyrolysis Mass Spectrometry

by Don Robins and Colin Gutteridge

1. Introduction

The survival of organic residues in archaeological sites depends both upon their chemical nature and their interaction with the environment. Chemical and bacterial attack, and groundwater leaching, will often remove organic structures leaving a residue of insoluble and intractable material with little morphological content to aid identification. The survival of such residues will be enhanced further by their inclusion in an inorganic matrix such as ceramic or soil. In turn, such occlusion may itself immobilise the residue and so provide a long term marker of previous organic content in terms of both identity and location.

2. Pyrolysis Mass Spectrometry

These intractable residues may be investigated successfully with the technique of pyrolysis-mass spectrometry (Py-MS), which has been exploited successfully in the analysis of such residues in other fields such as organic geochemistry. In the techniques of Py-MS microgram samples taken from the specimen, which is often an inorganic matrix with traces of organic material occluded within, are thermally degraded - that is decomposed by heat as opposed to oxidation - very rapidly (conventionally, by heating from ambient to 770°C in 10 seconds) under conditions of high vacuum. This causes the large polymeric molecules of the residue to produce low molecular weight fragments which are volatilised by the high temperature. The molecular fragments are then analysed conventionally by mass spectrometry by linking the gaseous outflow to a suitable machine.

The resulting mass spectrum can be regarded as a fingerprint of the original organic content of the sample and can therefore be interpreted through the use of suitable calibration and comparative material.

3. Discriminant Analysis of Residue Data

In practice such residues will produce large numbers of volatile molecular fragments and their direct characterisation by mass spectrometry is less useful than discriminant analysis of the populations of fragments produced. Such comparative analysis across carefully constructed sample suites, where each sample is analysed in triplicate, allows samples to be differentiated in terms of their residues as a preliminary step towards identification. Such analyses were undertaken with the Spong Hill material.

4. Sample Sets from Spong Hill Material

In starting to analyse organic materials from the Spong Hill ceramics, the samples were organised into a suite which would optimise the discriminant analysis technique. Thus, the first distinction was drawn between those sherds which possessed a visible residue (V) and those that did not (NV). A suite of such sherds were sampled on both inner (A) and outer (B) surfaces. Such sampling involved the scraping of microgram amounts as detailed above, and a number of subsidiary sampling exercises were conducted to explore the optimum sampling methodology during this study. These are not pertinent to this report and are not discussed here apart from the comment that the sampling strategy described above was clearly demonstrated to be replicable.

5. Results of Discriminant Analysis of Spong Hill Ceramics

The results of the discriminant analysis is shown in Fig.8 (microfiche). It immediately demonstrates that the reproductibility of samplings in the sherd was good, in keeping with the general experience of high replicability in Py-MS analysis.

The grouping of the samples does not appear to be random, showing that the residues are distinct chemically and suggesting that the fingerprints from the volatile material are at least partially derived from previous contents of the pots rather than from background soil or residual organic material in the original clay which may have survived firing.

6. Discussion

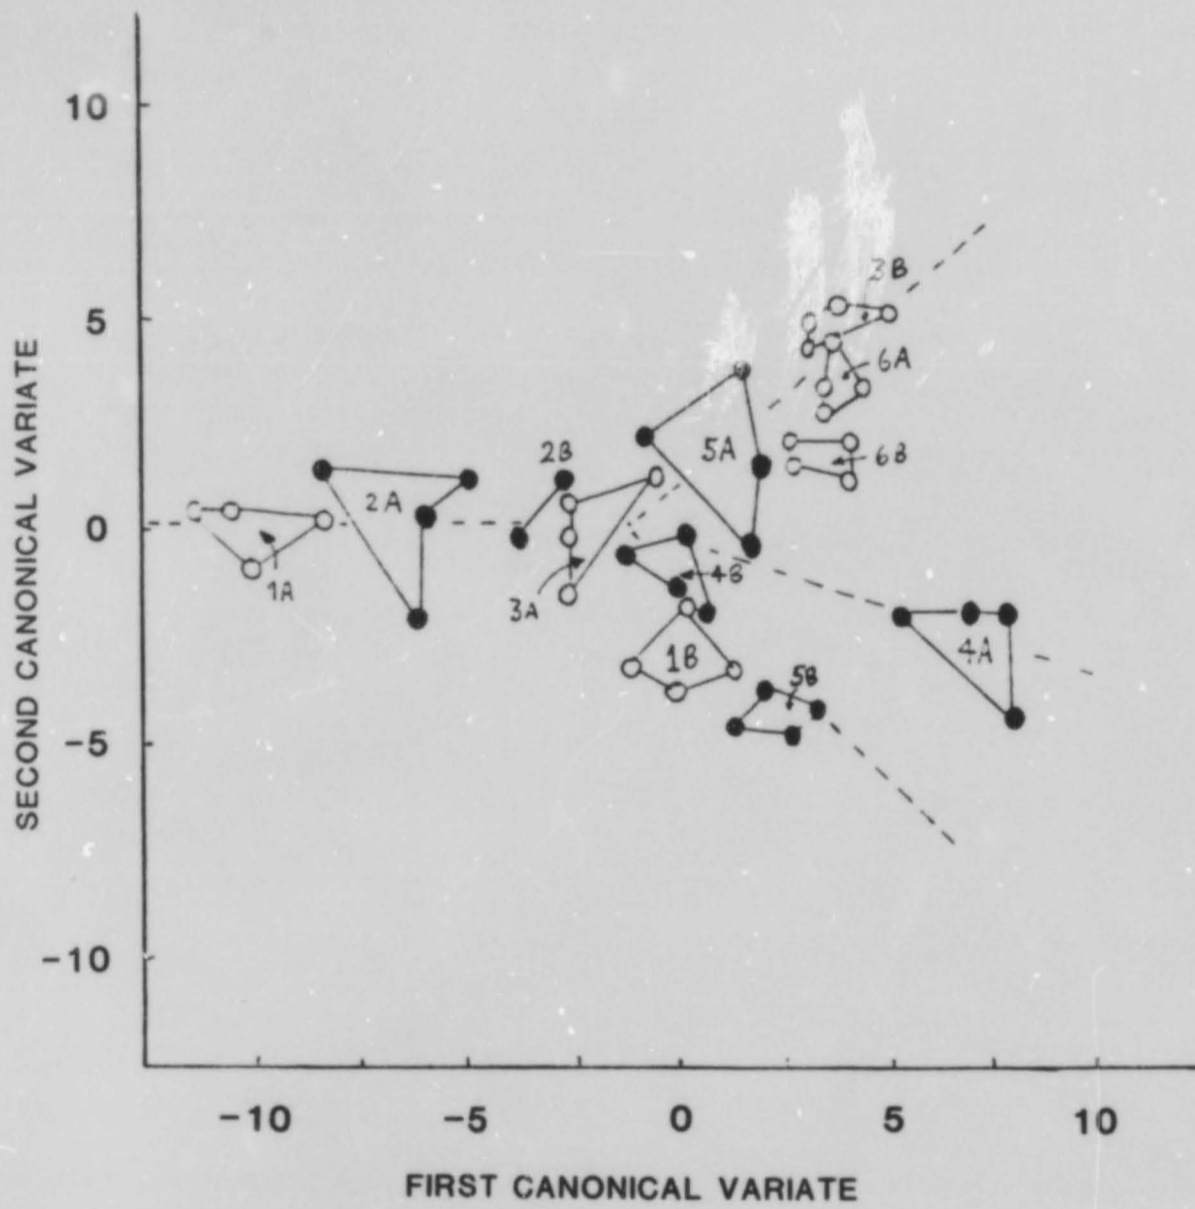

The grouping of the samples in Fig.8 does not derive from the presence or absence of a visible residue. This in itself is an important observation because of its implications for sampling and interpretational strategies which are often based upon the observation of a visible residue.

Examined in more detail, we note that the outer surface samples (B) also cross the V/NV categories which suggests that organic residues have permeated the entire sherd. With other sherds the A/B differences may indicate sequential use rather than soil variations, which would be expected to affect the discriminant analysis as indicated above. Put more simply contamination with soil would be expected to give a noticeable clustering with the B samples and this is not noticeable.

7. Conclusions

The preliminary discriminant analysis of this small sample suite concentrated upon methodology of sampling and suite construction and provided very encouraging results. This work can usefully be pursued by examining larger sample groups, together with appropriate soil profiles from the archaeological, stratigraphy, and by comparative analyses using ceramic sherds doped with the appropriate materials. Discrimination can also be enhanced by incorporating gas chromatography (GC) within the analytical chain to increase the identification level in the analytical finish.

Part I (EAA Report No. 6) revised

The complete Part I catalogue (revised) follows, and includes all the changes and additions necessary. Some gravegoods needed redrawing, or are additions resulting from re-examination of the bones and continuing work on the material, and these are published in Figs 150-161 (microfiche). Figure references are to Part I, unless Vol.V is specified.

Associations: Close to 20. Partly over context 492-3.

Pot: Stamps: Ig upper row, XIII lower, VIIIb, VIIc in panels.

Grave-goods: 1. Iron tweezers, full size, suspended on iron ring.

23/3772 (Figs 91, 135)

Associations: Close to 24, possibly contemporary.

Pot: Linear decoration around neck; four bosses on shoulder.

Stamps: IIc.

Grave-goods: 1. Bone, two playing pieces:(n.ill) 2. Bone bead; 3. Bronze sheet frag. (n.ill); 4. See "Also in pot".

Also in pot: 1. Burnt sherd, indet.

24/3773 (Fig.20)

Associations: Close to 23, possibly contemporary.

Pot: Plain.

25/3774 (Figs 52, 133)

Pot: Four repeats of pattern. 4 vertical applied bosses defined by lines, alternate with round bosses in panels.

Grave-goods: 1. ?Antler, triangular comb, bronze rivets, ring and dot pattern, broken; 2. Ivory (n.ill); 3. Glass, ?two beads (n.ill).

26/3775 (Figs 13, 126)

Associations: In ?group with 26, 33, 34, 35; touches 34 and 35.

Pot: Plain.

Grave-goods: 1. Crystal, faceted bead, broken; 2. See below "Also in pot". 3. Pebble, ?part of plano-convex ?'counter' (n.ill).

Also in pot: 2 burnt sherds, Early Saxon.

27 (Fig.56)

Pot: Panels above a line, occupied by dots and vertical lines.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass (n.ill).

28/3581 (Figs 42, 109, 123, 136)

Pot: 5 necklines above 25 vertical bosses and 4 large multiple swags; complete.

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze brooch, foot and pin catch only; 2. Bronze sheet frags. (n.ill); 3. Bronze rivet; 4. Antler ring, broken, plain; 5. Glass beads, c.12-14 (n.ill); 6. Ivory (n.ill); 7. See below "Also in pot"; 8. Antler, spindlewhorl frag.

Also in pot: 2 burnt sherds, in det.

29/3776 (Fig.8)

Pot: Plain; complete.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass, three beads, red, ?green, black, striped (n.ill).

33/3587 (Figs 71, 127)

Associations: In group with 26, 34, 35. Possibly contemporary.

Pot: Row of stamps below 3 necklines. Stamp Group 14. Stamps:
Ia, Vi; complete.

Grave-goods: 1. 2 iron rivets probably from comb (n.ill); 2. Glass, blue and white striped bead; 3. Glass (n.ill); 4. See below. "Also in pot".

Also in pot: 2 burnt sherds, Early Saxon

34/3582 (Figs 35, 110, 125)

Associations: In group with 26, 33, 35. Possibly contemporary.

Pot: On neck, slashed cordon defined by lines, above 5 groups of slashed bosses and vertical lines, possibly stamped)

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze, upper disc from applied brooch. Decorated in repoussé, design consisting of four inward facing heads arranged in a cross around a central concentric circle motif, and separated from each other by double-outline triangles within an egg-and-tongue border; 2. Iron frag;
3. Glass, two beads (n.ill).

35/3580 (Fig.49)

Associations: In group with 26, 33, 34. Possibly contemporary.

Pot: 3 necklines. Vertical lines over bosses separate four panels each containing a single large dot.

Grave-goods: 1. Iron rivets with frags., remains of comb (n.ill).

36 (Fig.76)

Pot: 2 zones stamps defined by necklines.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass (n.ill); 2. Iron, shears (Vol.V, Fig.151); 3.
Iron, bar (Vol.V, Fig.151).

37=58

38/3780 (Figs 24, 118)

Pot: 8 groups of vertical lines, below 4 necklines.

Grave-goods: 1. Iron tweezers, miniature; 2. Glass, bead (n.ill); 3. Iron, shears (Vol.V, Fig.151); 4. Bronze, sheet, 2 frags., 5. Iron, frag. of ?knife.

39/3583 (Figs 50, 134)

Associations: In ?contemporary group with 40, 43, 62 and/or 63; touches 40.

Pot: 4 necklines. 7 applied vertical bosses separate 6 panels, each containing a single 5-dot rosette and chevron.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass (n.ill); 2. Bone, triangular comb, linear decoration; 3. Antler, frags. of strip, pierced; 4. Antler, spindlewhorl.

40/3781 (Figs 92, 116, 118)

Associations: See 39 and 62.

Pot: Slashed cordon above lines at neck. 6 bosses. Sloping lines and stamps in panels. Stamps: IIIa.

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze, faceted tweezers; 2. Bronze, earscoop on same ring as 1; 3. Iron knife blade; 4. Iron, bent blade(s).

43/3586 (Fig.35)

Associations: In group with 39, 40, 63, 62. (See 62)

Pot: Pedestal. 2 zones of sloping lines defined by lines above vertical grooves and lines around middle.

44/3783 (Fig.92)

Associations: Relationship with 44a unknown.

Pot: Complex bossed and stamped decoration. 7 round bosses around neck, 4 repeats of pattern around middle. Stamps: IIc, IVd, VIIb.

Gravegoods: 1. Glass, one bead, white (n.ill).

44a

Pot: Sherds, plain. (Record card "under 44").

45/3784 (Fig.16)

Pot: Plain.

47

Pot: Sherds (n.ill).

Also in pot: 1 burnt sherd, ?E.S.

48/3785 (Figs 32, 123, 125)

Pot: Flat slashed band on neck, sloping grooves defined by single lines.

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze wire; 2. Iron, flat triangular frag.

49= Context 499

50=51

51(=50) (Fig.49)

Pot: Row of dots defined by lines on neck; large and small dots in rows and panels below.

52 (Figs 15, 109)

Pot: Plain; hole in base.

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze brooch, bow and part of head plate; 2. Bronze brooch, wide bow only, punched dots along edges; 3. Bronze brooch, foot from small cruciform; 4. Glass, c.20 beads (n.ill); 5. Ivory, many frags. (n.ill).

53 (Fig.79)

Associations: Cuts 58.

Pot: Row of stamps defined by necklines above three line chevrons. Stamps: Vg.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass, one bead (n.ill), blue with ?red and white spots.

54 (Fig.39)

Associations: Next to 58, possibly contemporary.

Pot: Raised slashed cordon below 5 necklines, vertical bosses and lines around middle.

Grave-goods: 1. Comb frags., including 2 small rivets.

55/3584 (Figs 49, 120)

Pot: Single large dots in each chevron panel.

Gravegoods: 1. Iron shears, miniature.

56/3585 (Figs 49, 120)

Pot: Single large dots in panels.

Grave-goods: 1. Iron shears, miniature.

57/3588 (Fig.71)

Pot: Stamp Group 14: Stamps la, vi.

58(=37) (Figs 97, 108, 125, 136)

Associations: Under 53, near 54.

Pot: Plain. Lower half only (n.ill).

Grave-goods: 1. Iron ring; 2. Iron spring, pin and crossbar from cruciform brooch; 3. Iron spring and crossbar from second brooch; 4. Iron, possible pin. 5. Antler ring, broken, plain; 6. Glass, beads, c.6, reddish, blue with red spots, and others (n.ill).

59 (Fig.41)

Pot: 4 or 5 vertical bosses, groups of sloping lines.

60 (Fig.28)

Pot: 4 line chevron below necklines.

61/3787 (Fig.43)

Associations: Mixed with 61a.

Pot: 15 bosses, each within double arches below 2 zones of necklines.

61a

Associations: Mixed with 61.

Pot: Missing.

62 (Figs 109, 127)

Associations: In ?group 39, 40, 43, 62 and/or 63. Cuts 63, touches 43, possibly contemporary. (Either 62 or 63 may be contemporary with main group, with 62 later or 63 earlier.)

Pot: Plain.(n.ill)

Grave-goods: 1. Bronze, remains of one or two cruciform brooches. Half round knobs on headplate, faceted bow, possibly non-zoomorphic, faceted foot; 2. Glass, 7 or more beads, red, blue and blue and white (n.ill); 3. Ivory (n.ill).

63 (Fig.79)

Associations: See 62.

Pot: Stamp row defined by lines above irreg. chevron and stamps.
Stamps: IIc, IIIa.

Grave-goods: 1. Glass, melted beads, whitish colour, and 1 blue (n.ill);
2. Antler, spindlewhorl frag.; 3. Ivory, frag.

64 (Not allocated)

1000

Condition: Crushed in situ. Fragmentary.

Pot: Sherds (n.ill). Traces of bossed and linear decoration.

1001 (Fig.96)

Condition: Crushed in situ. Fairly complete. Pit visible on one side.

Associations: Cut context 59.

Pot: Small circular applied bosses (and traces of linear decoration below rim, on 1 sherd).

Grave-goods: 1. ?Comb, rivet and frags (n.ill).

1002 (Fig.72)

Condition: Crushed in situ. Survives to just above shoulder after conservation.

Associations: Close to 1004, touching 1003, possibly in same urnpit and contemporary. Cuts context 59.

Pot: 6 pendant triangular stamp panels, below 3 necklines.

Stamps: Ia, Vc, IIc, VIIc. Stamp Group 47.
