

NEW BRONZE AGE FINDS AT THE BRITISH MUSEUM: TWITTERING...

July 29, 2011 Steven Matthews Day of Archaeology, Day of Archaeology 2011 Britain, British Museum, Bronze Age, Hoard, hoards, Internet access, metal detectorist, UK

Arrived at the BM to find a small plastic container full of neatly wrapped objects waiting for me: a new hoard from Nottinghamshire.

Like many Bronze Age hoards from Britain it was found by a metal detectorist on private agricultural land.

The hoard consisted of 18 objects, some complete and some fragments, including tools and weapons.

Unfortunately I have no Internet access here at the BM so pictures can be found on my twitter feed @bronzeageman.

First, the sword remains...