

A DAY IN MONREPOS- ARCHAEOLOGICAL RESEARCH CENTRE AND MUSEUM FOR HUMAN BEHAVIOURAL EVOLUTION

July 2, 2012 Monrepos - Archaeological Research Centre and Museum for Human Behavioural Evolution Archaeological Media, Day of Archaeology, Day of Archaeology 2012, Education, Journalism, Museum Archaeology, Prehistory, Science Anthropology, Archaeological Research Centre, archaeologist, Archaeology, Facebook, Germany, Mediation, Monrepos, Neuwied, Social Media, Twitter and Co

I'm an archaeologist in Monrepos – Archaeological Research Centre and Museum for Human Behavioural Evolution. Our Centre is located in Neuwied in Germany -between Frankfurt and Cologne. As mentioned above we are interested in everything related with the Ice Age. We consist in a group of scientists, volunteers, students and technical employees.

Our building is an old castle that is still in the renovation period. That's the reason why our Museum is closed since November 2010.

Since last year my daily work was in the museum or museum related. I did the guide tours for kids and adults. At the moment I'm doing the public relation work, mostly the Social Media like Facebook, Twitter and Co, beside other organisational things.

I think Public Relation is very important in the archaeological fields. So I'm really happy about the Archaeological Day 2012. If we are only doing our researches the rest of the world will not be interested what we are doing and we don't get their support and they will not understand why our work is important for them. So we need more "mediators" between Archaeologists and the Public.