

A NOT SO SUNNY DAY IN SARDINIA

July 11, 2014 S'Urachi Day of Archaeology 2014, Excavation, Iron Age, Italy Archaeology, geophysics, Mediterranean, Nuraghe, Sardinia

At nuraghe S'Urachi on the Mediterranean island of Sardinia (<http://blogs.brown.edu/surachi/>), the 2014 Day of Archaeology takes place both online and on-site, as today is also our open day.

Against all expectations and the odds, the 2014 Day of Archaeology looks and feels more like fall than summer: at 7 am, we arrived on site under a gentle drizzle that soon turned into a near-constant fine rain – unheard of in the Mediterranean at this time of the year!

Day-by-day impressions and views are posted on www.facebook.com/scavisurachi.

sieving dirt and geophysics on the nuraghe (by our colleagues of Eastern Atlas)