The following are thanked:—

The Corbridge Excavation Committee for drawings, photographs and blocks, illustrating Prof. Haverfield's paper on the smaller objects, and pottery and Prof. Meek's on animal remains.

Mr. Matthew Mackey, for loan of original hearth tax receipt reproduced on p. 67.

The contributors of plates VIII-XVI of Durham Seals.

FIG. 44.—PERFORATED BRONZE FOUND AT CORSTOPITUM.

ADDITIONS, CORRECTIONS, ETC.

- Page 67, 15th line from bottom, for 'south side, to Newgate' read 'east side.'
- Page 182, fig. 12. This brooch was found at the sewage or refuse ditch, (pp. 167, 200). When first thrown out, it escaped notice, and was detected in the replacement of the soil. Mr. Forster thinks that it belongs to the soil above the ditch. In any case, it was not found (as is stated incidentally in the recent volume of the Cumberland and Westmorland Transactions, XI 442) in association with 'pre-Hadrianic coins and pottery.' No coins were found here, and the pottery (plate VI) formed a distinct layer with which this brooch had nothing to do. The good preservation of the fibula is noteworthy, but is not altogether uncommon in pieces of this special type.
- Page 184, line 15, for 'later third' read 'third.'
- Page 198, lines 6, 7, from bottom, for 'a scabbard attachment, two scabbard-tips (plate III 10) similar to one . . . . plate XXXV 13,' read 'two scabbard-tips (fig. 36); a scabbard attachment (plate IV 10) similar to one . . . . plate XXXV 13.'
- Page 191, line 3, for 'nine' read 'ten.'
- Page 202, line 15. The first letter of the name after the word 'baking' should be  $\Delta$  not  $v$ .

 POSTSCRIPT TO 'STRUGGLE BETWEEN MERCHANT AND CRAFT
GILDS OF NEWCASTLE' (pp. 77-101).

'More water passes by the mill than wots the miller of' and I did not know until after the above paper was printed off that, whilst I was making the extracts and writing the comments contained in it, the same star chamber proceedings were being published at greater length by the Selden Society.

They will be found in that society's volume for 1910, No. 25, page 70, and instead of being merely abstracted, as in the foregoing article, the proceedings are set out verbatim. The volume is edited by Mr. I. S. Leadam, who has added a number of very useful notes, giving explanations of the terms used, and I am glad to be able to refer our members to the Selden Society's volume.

The preceding article in the same volume, page 68, sets out the proceedings in the dispute of 1510, between the corporation of Newcastle and John Stonewell, the then prior of Tynemouth, mentioned in Mr. Craster's history of Tynemouth in the new History of Northumberland, volume VIII, page 290.

F. W. DENDY.
