John Warburton was born at Bury, Lancashire, 28th February, 1682, the son of Benjamin Warburton and his wife Mary, daughter of Michael Buxton of Buxton (plate I). His descent<sup>1</sup> has been traced to Sir John Warburton, Kt., and his wife Mary, daughter of Sir William Brereton, who was also the ancestor of Sir George Warburton, of Arley and Warburton, Co. Chester, created a baronet 27th June, 1660.<sup>2</sup> It is interesting to note that the third baronet, Sir George Warburton (d. 1743) was a subscriber to this map. John Warburton, as a youth, was appointed to the Excise service, on the nomination of the Earl of Derby, and rose to be a supervisor in that service. His knowledge of the art of heraldry recommended him to the College of Arms and he was appointed Somerset Herald on 18th June, 1720.<sup>3</sup> He was then living at Bedale, Yorkshire, but after his creation as herald he usually lived in his apartments in that College. His skill as a surveyor and his topographical knowledge qualified him for election as a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1719; whilst his great interest in and knowledge of antiquities recommended him for election to the Society of Antiquaries of London, of which he became a Fellow in 1720. He held his office of herald and his fellowship of the Society of Antiquaries until his death, in 1759, but was removed from the Royal Society in 1757. He was twice married, first to Dorothy, daughter of Andrew Hudleston of Hutton John, from whom he separated in 1716, secondly to a widow whose name is unknown.<sup>4</sup> He had two daughters, one of whom married John Elphinstone, R.N., rear-admiral, who became commander-in-chief of the Russian Fleet.<sup>5</sup> His son John became Exon of the Yeomen of the Guard and, being in France, was guillotined as a spy in 1793.<sup>6</sup>

Such, in brief outline, are the chief facts of John Warburton's life. He was obviously a man of great ability, but, though of good birth, he did not apparently receive the education usual with those he came in contact with after 1720, when he was thirty-eight years old.

He probably spoke with a Yorkshire or Lancashire accent and his manners would not have been improved by some ten years in the rough service of the Excise. It is therefore not surprising that he was unpopular with the "learned heralds" of the College of Arms or with the urbane fellows of the Royal Society and of the Society of Antiquaries. The chief of what we know of his character was written by his fellow heralds, who were obviously very prejudiced; but one of them wrote, "though his conduct was faulty yet he was extremely ill-used, especially by the younger Anstis, who was of a violent tyrannical disposition".<sup>7</sup>

References to him by Bishop Nicolson, Roger Gale and Ralph Thoresby, made whilst he was surveying part of Yorkshire for his map of that county, give a more pleasant picture of him.<sup>8</sup>

It is probably true that he was disputacious, rough in his manners and not too scrupulous in some of his dealings—faults perhaps not uncommon at the time he lived or indeed later. He had "small Latin" but he was not "illiterate"; his Journal, as printed in YAS, XV, pp. 61 ff., though it does not show any great literary ability, is yet clearly written in good English, his spelling, especially place-names, is rather shaky, but again no worse than that of other writers of letters of that date. Nor can it be true that he did not know the difference between "a right angle and an obtuse one" when it is written that "one of J.W.'s titles to the gratitude of posterity is his collection of ancient drawings (425 of them) of gentlemen's seats and places of interest in Yorkshire amongst the Lansdowne MSS."<sup>9</sup>

Whatever were the weaknesses in Warburton's character, and they were partly those of the times in which he lived, they do not seem to me to warrant the attack made upon him by Sir George Macdonald in Arch. Ael., 4th ser., X, pp. 40 ff., nor do they excuse such expressions as "a consummate and unblushing liar", "scoundrel", "charlatan", "burglar"—this because he did not anticipate by some two hundred years the methods of "scientific examination"—a "picker of the brains of better men than himself and got results from it"—surely a very unkind way of saying that Warburton asked for and received help from his friends. When Sir George Macdonald wrote in this polemical eighteenth-century style, he must have forgotten that he was writing of one who lived then and whose conduct should not be judged by the standards of the twentieth century.

His famous map,<sup>10</sup> made from his own survey, was published in 1716, the first of similar maps of the counties of York, Middlesex, Essex and Hertford. A Journal written by him, and some account of his method of work whilst surveying part of Yorkshire, was printed in YAS, XV, 61, and a few scattered field notes and sketches for Northumberland are printed in AA, 3rd ser., XIII, 1. These maps are now very rare and only one imperfect copy is said to be known of Yorkshire. I have found only three of Northumberland in existence, one at the Royal Geographical Society, one in the British Museum and one in the Bodleian Library, Oxford.<sup>11</sup> It was apparently published in two states, the example at the Royal Geographical Society is of the first and, as the armorials upon it are very clear and bright impressions, I have blazoned the shields of arms in the sequel from it. It measures 48 × 32 inches over all and was obviously intended for a wall map. It is dedicated to the Prince Regent in an ornate panel beneath a decorative engraving of Apollo and the nine Muses. The central panel contains the map with, beneath it, nineteen engravings of Roman altars and inscriptions, with a note beneath each telling where they were found in Northumberland. On the left of the map are 170 engraved shields of arms arranged alphabetically of Such persons as enjoy lands within the county,<sup>12</sup> and ten shields of Such Honble. persons as have born Titles of Dukes and Earls of Northumberland since the Norman Conquest.<sup>12</sup> The panel on the right side contains 180 similar shields of arms of Such persons as have been encouragers of this work.<sup>12</sup> The copy in the Bodleian

<sup>10</sup> Catalogued in A descriptive list of the Maps of Northumberland, by Dr. Harold Whittaker, published in 1949 by this Society and the Public Libraries Committee of the city.

<sup>11</sup> I am indebted to Sir Edmund Craster for telling me of it and giving me the reference—Gough's Maps, Northumberland 9.

Library, Oxford,<sup>13</sup> and the imperfect one in the Central Library, Newcastle upon Tyne,<sup>14</sup> are both of the map in its second state. It contains engravings of more altars, inscriptions and tables and, in addition, some thirteen cuts of Roman coins, an intaglio, a pair of shoes and a curious engraving of Rob of Risingham which "I find cut out on a Rock near Risingham in Read's Dale, called the Soldans Stone". The sea, which is left plain in the first state, is wavy, ships sail upon it, Neptune with Trident bestrides a dolphin and sea monsters disport themselves therein. The shields of arms, on each side of the central map, are carefully and accurately drawn, showing clearly the subordinate charges and the smaller differences. The tinctures are indicated by the very inartistic and disfiguring method of lines and dots—now fortunately not used by heraldic artists. The name and rank of its owner is written beneath each shield and for clergymen the benefice each holds is also given, with one exception, correctly. The list of landowners, on the left side, contains the names of most of the county families of the early eighteenth century, though there are a few omissions and some errors in the shields attributed to them. The "encouragers", that is the subscribers, on the right-hand side have been more difficult to identify<sup>15</sup> and some of their arms cannot be related to the persons for whom they are given; it ought to be remembered that in the early years of the eighteenth century great latitude was, if not officially allowed, at least taken for "gents" whom it was thought ought also to be "armigers". I have not, however, attempted a detailed or critical examination of the heraldry. It is perhaps worthy of note that at this time only landowners are styled "esquires", whilst of the "encouragers" only seven are so called. The large number of clergy subscribers is surprising. The fifty of them in that list include practically all the parishes in the county and they are all given their correct titles as rector or vicar, with one parson and one lecturer. These lists are an interesting and useful record of the names and arms of Northumbrians living about the year 1716, made by one evidently well acquainted with the county, who became Somerset Herald probably on account of the knowledge of heraldry shown upon this and his other maps.<sup>16</sup>

Where more than one shield is given for a family I have put them under one number in the following list so as to save both expense and space. The identifications made for the landowners have not, for the most part, been difficult; but for some of the cadet branches and for the "encouragers" in the second alphabet it has been more troublesome, so there are probably some mistakes. Where no identification is given, it will be understood that none had been made. The letter E in capital italics following a name is for esquire. The letter G, also in italics, is for gent.

THIS ALPHABET CONTAINS THE ARMS OF SUCH PERSONS AS ENJOY LANDS WITHIN THE COUNTY.
