The Air [sic] Terrace Site comprises the land from Briar Rhydding in the west to Buck Lane as its eastern boundary. The northern boundary is the Bradford to Otley main rod. The southern boundary is the River Air. Over practically the whole of this area which has been under plough flint implements of Mesolithic to Bronze Age type have been picked up. In the following numbered index M [in a circle] marked this way implies microlith or microlithic type of implement. The fields marked opposite nos. 13 + 8 also 14 would no doubt yield flint implements but up to 1958 have during the years I have been searching always been under grass. In fact some of the others in which I have in the past made good finds are now 1958 back to grass.

The plan opposite can only give an impression generally of where flint implements were found as they are only artificial enclosure boundaries.
