Figure 1. Location of monitored footings (blue line) with modern services shown in black

Results:

The footings measured 0.6m wide and c.1m deep. They were excavated through concrete and associated sub base which sealed a made-up mid-pale brown gravelly sand at the eastern end of the trenches, changing gradually to a dark brown gravelly sand in the south west corner where modern services had caused heavy disturbance. The natural subsoil was visible in the base of the trenches and consisted of a mid orangey brown 'hoggin' type coarse sandy gravel. No pre-modern finds were recovered from the trenches or the available spoil.

Plates 1&2. General views of the monitored excavations - all were of similar appearance.
