

pottery¹⁹. Although elsewhere a more specific date of the later 14th century has been suggested²⁰, it is probably unwise to attempt a more precise dating until more detailed research to locate Kingston ware and forms in securely dated contexts has been undertaken. The present report, regretfully so long delayed, will hopefully aid this research.

Acknowledgements

I should like to thank Ian MacDonald for producing the drawings for this report; John Musty, Steve Nelson, Clive Orton and James Thorn for much helpful discussion and advice; Jean le Patourel, Joan Wakeford and the Surrey Record Office for assistance with the documentary evidence; John Penn for geological advice; and members of Kingston upon Thames Archaeological Society and St Andrew's Archaeological Centre for the task of processing the pottery.

Permission to excavate the site was given by the Alliance Property Company. The material and site records are in the care of Kingston Museum, (Code KD 68: ER 4).
