Interpretation and discussion
Gully associated with Roman period agricultural site. The feature is truncated by a post-hole on its SW edge. Together there are likely to have formed a fence line, possibly for control of livestock.

Interpretation and discussion Wholly fills the small gully of [1914]. Pot sherds in it are likely residual due to small size and worn edges, but could still suggest a broadly Roman date for the fill. As the fill of the gully [1914] cuts the [1912] + [1913] also contained poss Roman finds, [1914] may not be massively later than [1912].

Interpretation and discussion
Cut of a curving linear, showing terminus to the East. [1967] Terminus to the West [1943] and a second curve shows terminus in the West again [] . Cut has evidence of rooting and charcoal. ambiguity Unsure what purpose the curved ditch has other than for drainage. The field has evidence of furrow ploughing so possibly some info was lost to this.
