EDITORIAL

Perceptive readers who have collected Northern Archaeology since Vol 1, part 1, will by now have realised from the colour changes of the cover that we are working our way through the Munsell Soil Colour Chart. We estimate that by Vol. 49 each reader should have the full colour spectrum available, although we appreciate that on-site use of our system may be slightly prohibitive through its bulk. However, this should not deter the true enthusiast; it has the advantage of being a good deal cheaper than the Munsell system and is a lot more interesting to read.

It is with regret that I have to announce that my co-editor, Sheena Crawford, has had to resign from her position due to her academic commitments at Cambridge. It only remains to thank her for her unstinting work on past issues and to give her my best wishes for the future.
