

A FIFTEENTH-CENTURY PEDIGREE

A. VERE WOODMAN, F.S.A.

The late Mr. F. G. Gurney was not, it appears, the first of his family to display a lively interest in genealogy.¹ Nearly five hundred years ago, his kinsman, Thomas Gurney of Halton, compiled a pedigree showing his descent from their common ancestor, a certain John Gurney the elder, who flourished about the middle of the fourteenth century. To this he added, a few years later, particulars of his own three marriages and of the births of his thirteen children, most of whom died in infancy.

That these documents were found, with other memoranda concerning his lands, among the court-rolls of the manor of Halton, recently deposited at Aylesbury, may be accounted for by the fact that his grandson, Henry Bradshaw, purchased that lordship of Henry VIII.

Thomas Gurney, sometime of East Marsh in the parish of Great Kimble, was, for many years prior to his death, deputy sheriff for the counties of Beds., Bucks, and Oxon. He was evidently bred to the law and he seems to have followed his calling with considerable success, for he augmented his inheritance in East Marsh by the purchase of fairly extensive lands in Halton, Edlesborough and Weston Turville. One of the earliest of these purchases was made in 1438 when he acquired a messuage in Halton called Mountagues place "for the greater part newly built." Here he settled about 1452. He died in 1480 and his death was presented at the court held on Thursday before the Translation of St. Edward, King and Martyr (20th June). His third wife Joan, to whom he gave, by a deed which bears his signature dated 8th March 1480, an annuity of 20s. issuing out of his lands in Great Kimble and Stone;² survived him for many years and was still living in 1513 when, on her surrender, Henry Bradshaw was admitted to a grove of wood in Halton.

Both the documents are in Thomas Gurney's hand. The earlier records all that he could discover about his ancestors and kinsmen. The later, which was perhaps written about 1472, for the birth of his youngest daughter Alice seems to have been added subsequently; gives particulars of his own family.

The more important of his numerous interlineations and additions have been printed in italics.

So detailed and early a pedigree must be quite exceptional and, although it would have added little to his knowledge of his forebears, it is much to be regretted that Mr. Gurney did not live to see this remarkable account of his family.
