

A: The original route network was drawn developed in AutoCAD as a series of straight-line segments drawn to avoid shallow contours and hazards, also incorporating historical evidence of sailing directions.

B: 5-Kilometre buffers were then placed around the route lines, which are used to hypothesise the traffic path in a particular sailing direction.

C: The routes were then trimmed to within a 50-kilometre distance from the coast, thereby focussing predominantly on national journeys.