

Watching Brief at Greystanes Field, Camptoun, East Lothian

On February 11, 2008, East Lothian Council Archaeology Service undertook a watching brief during groundbreaking works associated with the construction of an agricultural shed at Greystanes Field, Camptoun, East Lothian. The building works did not require planning permission, but as long cist burials had been found in this field in the past, it was decided that the Archaeology Service would monitor the soil stripping.

The stripped area was a rectangle measuring 9m by 13m. 0.35m of topsoil overlay the natural geology, which was an orange brown sandy clay. No archaeological features or artefacts were encountered.

Plate 1: Stripped area, facing northwest

Plate 2: Area during stripping, facing southeast

