

ARGYLL & BUTE

Glenorchy and Inishail parish

Barra a Chaistealain, Dalmally pole replacements

Watching brief

John Lewis – Scotia Archaeology

NN 16277 27001 & NN 16206 26964 Watching briefs were kept on 9 October 2015 during excavations for the replacement of two poles for an overhead power line a short distance S of Dalmally. One of the poles sits within the remains of the late medieval and post-medieval settlement of Barra a Chaistealain, a scheduled ancient monument; the other is located a short distance to the SW. Nothing of archaeological significance was encountered in either trench.

Archive and Report: RCAHMS

Funder: SSE