3003061	Monumental brasses and the Black Death -- a reappraisal	?	207 - 247	Stylistic analysis, particularly of the inscriptions, shows that there was continuity of production in the London A workshop right through the era of recurrent plague and that a second workshop, London B, was established towards the end of the 1350s. The workshops appear to have responded to a reduced supply of skilled labour by limiting their product range. The brasses of the plague years are modest in comparison with earlier brasses, though those commemorated were not of lower status. No large figure brasses date from this decade, though significant numbers of minor
